WOMAN GIVES TIP ON GIRL SLAYER

VICTIM OF MAN'S WRATH

STELLA KALE

FOLLOWED TO BEACH BY MAN

Salisbury Beach, June 7.—Police today found a woman witness who told of seeing one of the two suspects in the murder of pretty Stella Kale following the girl late Sunday night toward the south end of the beach where she was strangled to death shortly afterward.

Until they could question this witness more fully and grill the suspect on the same subject the investigators refused to give out any further details of her story.

Like an accusing finger pointed from the grave, a letter received today by Stacis Kale of Lawrence from her murdered sister, Stella, placed suspicion on the same man, according to the police.

The man in question has been questioned previously but not detained. The other suspect in the police net is a youth still in his teens who told friends, it is said, of an intention to buy sun-glasses because of an injured eye. A pair of these glasses was found near the body of the strangled girl.

TWICE IN succession American fliers have crossed the Atlantic at one "hop," Lindbergh flying to Paris, Chamberlin, with Levine, almost to Berlin.

What will military and naval gentlemen say now about their theory that "the airplane is no real menace to this country?"

Out of two attempts to fly across the ocean by American fliers, both succeed.

WHAT WOULD be the probable percentage of success if five thousand foreign aviators, with full government backing and unlimited expenditure of money, should fly the other way on a hostile errand?

CYRUS H. K. CURTIS' evening newspaper, never an alarmist, says these two flights "show a new war menace," and "the flight assumed in the opinion of military officials the cloak of military menace, emphasizing the need for adequate air defence."

THOUSANDS CHEER AIR HEROES AS THEY REACH END OF BERLIN JOURNEY

Berlin, June 7 (A.P.).—Clarence Chamberlin and Charles Levine brought their trans-Atlantic monoplane Columbia down on Tempelhofer Airfield at 5:51 o'clock this afternoon, (Berlin time) completing their interrupted flight from Roosevelt Field, N. Y.

The fliers hopped here from Kottbus where they were given a great public reception this morning. They left Kottbus at 4:15, making the 70-mile flight to Berlin in one hour and 36 minutes.

Brightening skies, following rain during the earlier day, greeted their arrival.

The huge airport was lined with expectant crowds for hours before the American fliers were scheduled to appear.

There were 50,000 present when the plane arrived. Greatest enthusiasm then prevailed. Girls threw kisses, men thundered cheers and the police had a difficult time in holding the immense crowd behind the ropes.

After the welcoming ceremonies there was another rush to get near the airmen, but the police cordon held the cheering mob in check.

Welcoming delegations and guests of honor, including American Ambassador Jacob G. Schurman and members of the American embassy staff, arrived at the field shortly after 4 p. m.

The moment the Columbia was sighted nearing the field the Stars and Stripes were run up the main flagstaff. In approaching the field Chamberlin piloted the plane over Berlin proper, flying to the central part of the capital in order to give the populace a chance to see the plane that had conquered the Atlantic.

As the plane finally came down the crowds below roared a deafening welcome.

A dozen specks in the sky to the southeast of Berlin gave the first indication of the Columbia's approach to the field.

There was the most tense expectancy as the throngs awaited the final act in the trans-Atlantic air drama, which had set a new long distance flight record.

The Columbia was easily recognized among the squadron of pilots German planes, as its picture had appeared in every newspaper for days.

The uncertainty and impatience which had possessed the waiting

LINDBERGH EXALTS CHAMBERLIN PLANE

By Radio to I. N. S.)

On Board U. S. Cruiser Memphis, June 7.—Captain Charles A. Lindbergh, homeward bound upon this scarably displayed undiminished interest today in the New York-to-Germany flight of Clarence D. Chamberlin.

After breakfast with Vice-Admiral Burrage, with whom he has become a chum, Lindbergh discussed the Bellanca airplane of Aviator Chamberlin, saying:

"I always felt that the Bellanca could make such a flight. I am glad it succeeded."

Asked whether his own experience in having so much gasoline left when he reached Paris did not give the pilot of the Bellanca assurance that

ROBERT C. HILLIARD, 70, FAMOUS ACTOR, IS DEAD

New York, June 7 (A.P.)—Robert Cochran Hilliard, known as the handsomest man on the American stage, died at his home here last night at the age of 70, it was announced today. He had been in ill health for the last six years.

Hilliard's first vehicle was "False Shame." Later he appeared, for the first time in New York, in "A Daughter of Ireland." One of his outstanding successes in later years was "The Pride of Race."

He is survived by his widow, the former Miss Olga Everard, daughter of the late James Everard, from whom she inherited an estate of several million dollars.

A son by a former marriage is Commander Robert Bell Hilliard, U. S. N., stationed at the Boston Navy Yard.

Fliers Tell of Thrills While Lost in Fogs

(Special Cable to the Boston Evening American.)

Kottbus, Germany, June 7.—A first hand recital of the amazing adventures of Clarence Chamberlin and Charles A. Levine, as they groped their way at night through a thick fog that lay like a pall over all Germany, became available for the first time to a representative of the Boston Evening American soon after the heroic American fliers had luncheon here today.

Hovering O'er Berlin ~ Bavarian Birdmen in Review ~ Crowds Welcome Fliers

AS CITY LOOKED TO AIRMEN
This is the way Berlin appears from the air, and how the celebrated Bellanca plane with Chamberlin and Levine soared proudly over the city.

CHEERING THRONGS GREET AIR HEROES IN BERLIN

Berliners gave way to wild cheering and waving of arms as their vigil was at last rewarded.

Nation Proud of Fliers

Before the Columbia had arrived a brass band, gay in red uniforms, blared popular tunes. Many of them were Sousa marches. But the band's best efforts were drowned as the crowd roared its welcome to the Americans.

When the Columbia swooped to land, thousands at the airport cafe cleared the tables of cups and linen and then mounted them as vantage points to see the landing. While girls waved handkerchiefs and threw kisses, the band struck up American airs.

Ambassador Schurman then walked out on the landing field where he greeted the fliers and escorted them to the official reception stand, where both were formally welcomed. Huge laurel wreaths were placed on the plane's propeller and the Americans were escorted to the reception hall of the air drome while the Columbia was hauled into one of the Lufthansa hangars.

As Chamberlin and Levine left the plane, the crowd impetuously attempted to break the police lines about it, but did not get far. Chamberlin at once mounted the fuselage of the plane and acknowledged the great tribute.

Schurman's Welcome

Ambassador Schurman, welcoming Chamberlin on his arrival here hailed him as a messenger of goodwill and friendship from the American people to the German people and then invited him and Mr. Levine to be his guests at the American embassy.

"Welcome to the aviator who made the first non-stop flight from New York to Germany and covered the greatest distance ever made in continuous flight," the Ambassador said. "In accomplishing this wonderful exploit you have at the same time enlarged our vision of the possibilities of human achievement.

"We Americans here are proud of you. The American people are proud of you. We all congratulate you most enthusiastically, congratulate and salute you as the conqueror of the ocean and the champion of the air.

Guests of Envoy

"I hail you also as the celestial messenger of good will and friendship from the American people to the German people—friends united over the ocean throughout the 18th and 19th centuries and now, please heaven, also more closely through the air in the 20th century and all centuries to follow.

"I am deluded that you and your companion in your flight, Levine, arrive in Germany in such excellent condition and beg you both to come with me now to the American embassy where you will be my guests."

One of the first messages conveyed to Chamberlin after his landing was that a telephone connection was being held open from the air field by way of London so that he might talk with his mother in Iowa.

Following today's welcome the fliers will be given a reception tomorrow by President von Hindenburg. They will be greeted by Chancellor Marx. On Thursday noon they will be entertained at luncheon by Foreign Minister Stresemann.

The Berlin Magistrate plans a reception and dinner at the City Hall and a gala performance at the Civic Opera. The Lufthansa, or German Air League, and the Aero Club also are to entertain the fliers.

Throngs Near Riot When the Plane Leaves Kottbus

By H. R. KNICKERBOCKER,
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

Kottbus, Germany, June 7.—The Bellanca plane Columbia took the air again today, continuing its flight from New York to Berlin.

The plane, which was forced down here yesterday, suffering a broken propeller, hopped off at 4:16 this afternoon for Berlin, with Clarence Chamberlin and Charles A. Levine, who made the flight across the Atlantic in the plane, guiding its course.

Nearly 15,000 people were present to see the Americans make their start, some coming from as far as 500 miles distant, and hotels and private homes were crowded with visitors at luncheon time.

When Chamberlin and Levine were in the cockpit they were handed two huge wreaths by the Mayor of Kottbus.

After thanking him they spun their motor for the delectation of the crowds and then taxied across the field and began to climb into the clouds, with the nose of the Bellanca headed towards Berlin.

Twelve Lufthansa planes followed on the trail of the Bellanca, acting as an escort.

The crowd, which was the largest ever assembled in Kottbus, was too much for the police at times, and once it broke through the police lines and rushed for the Bellanca plane.

Only the valiant efforts of the police, fighting amidst hysterical women and children and stampeding men, prevented a near riot and saved the plane from being crushed by the mob.

Four mechanics and three engineers worked all night fitting a new propeller to the Bellanca, to replace the one broken when the Columbia

Coolidge Thanks Hindenberg for Reception

Washington, June 7 (I.N.S.). President Coolidge today sent a cable to President Hindenberg of Germany thanking him for the reception which Germany has accorded Clarence D. Chamberlin and Charles A. Levine for their trans-Atlantic flight.

President Hindenberg had previously cabled his congratulations to Mr. Coolidge on the flight.

President Coolidge's message follows:

"I thank you for your friendly message about the flight of Chamberlin and Levine. They carry with them the good wishes of America to Germany. I am glad to add my personal good wishes to you and the German people and at the same time to thank you for the kind reception given the American aviators."

GRILL SUSPECT MENTIONED IN SLAIN GIRL'S LETTER

attck it out here all Summer, because of his peculiar actions," Stella Kale wrote of the first man. Her letter was written after church on Sunday and mailed shortly before she met her death on the beach.

The pretty blonde girl also wrote of meeting a Haverhill youth whom she referred to as "a sap from Haverhill." She said he stayed so late he had to walk home to that city, but he wrote her a letter the following day in which he said he "walked on air."

This young man, whose letter Stella forwarded to her sister for her amusement, evidently became smitten at their first meeting, for he expressed in ardent words the hope that their friendship would continue and he poetically called himself "a pilgrim on the highway."

ATTACK ON MRS. RAND.

A second attack on a woman was attempted shortly before midnight and discovered early today, and a boy of eighteen is under arrest charged with the attempted attack. After long questioning he was taken to Amesbury court for arraignment.

The woman is Mrs. Gladys Dickens Rand, with her husband an occupant of a cottage in Cable avenue. She awoke to find an intruder stealing into her room, her husband being at work.

Snapping on the light she battled the intruder furiously until both together they tumbled down a flight of stairs. There her husband found her unconscious when he came home and later she identified Albert C. White, eighteen, of Nashua, N. H., a Summer employe here, as the intruder. White declared his innocence.

White, who was questioned along with other strangers here in connection with the murder investigation yesterday, was again grilled vigorously today by Detective Lieutenant John Stokes of the State Police, State Detective William Murray of Lynn and State Detective Richard Griffin of Haverhill, as well as Chief of Police Smith of this town.

In court White was held in $20,000 bail for a hearing a week from today. He leaped to his feet and shouted: "They've got nothing on me." His plea was not guilty.

Stokes and Murray were dispatched here to assist the other investigators by Captain Bligh, head of the State detectives.

GAVE NEWS TO PUBLIC.

Chairman George R. French of the Board of Selectmen is working indefatigably to assist in running down clews. French has been conducting a campaign to "clean up" objectionable places here and he was advised by friends to "cover up" the traces of the attempted attack on Mrs. Rand, but instead he chose to let the public know the truth, for he believed it wiser to show everybody that offenders against girls and women here will be punished at all cost.

White, the boy arrested in the Rand case, is said to have admitted knowing Miss Kale, but he denied ever making a "date" with her or attempting to bother her. He had an alibi for the night of the murder and police did not shake it.

Teddy Michaelis.

Clothing was taken by the police from both White's lodging room and from the studio-bungalow, where Stella worked for Arthur Williams. They would not reveal their purpose in this move. A search of both places was also made for clews.

The ownership of a leghorn straw hat with a highly-colored band, found on the beach near where the murder was committed, has not been established. The hat looms as a clue of extreme importance, especially if the owner is found to be a man who knew the dead girl. The owner will be required to explain its being left on the beach.

FINGERPRINTS TAKEN.

Fingerprints on the victim's clothing have been photographed and are being carefully preserved. Police are awaiting a report on the examination of the girl's stomach, by which they expect to establish the probable time of death.

Persons have been found who declare they think Stella was in her room at the studio later than 9:30, at which hour she started on a walk and never returned, according to her employer, "Peggy" Pearson, a girl of 18, who works in a lunch place next door to the studio, was questioned on this point today.

The murder victim's mother is reported in a state of collapse, while her father, together with Thaddeus Michaelis, a former sweetheart, are assisting the authorities with information about Stella's acquaintances.

Mother Talks on Longest Air Line to Longest Flier

Denison, Ia., June 7.—For seven minutes today, Mrs. E. C. Chamberlin at her home here was in communication by telephone and radiophone with her son, Clarence, trans-Atlantic flier, at the American embassy in Berlin. The call, which bridged half the United States, the ocean which her son spanned by plane, England, Holland and half of Germany, was declared by telephone officials to have been the longest ever made.

TO PROBE AUTO INSURANCE CO.

The Federal district attorney today began an investigation of the Massachusetts activities of the Manufacturers' Liability Insurance Company, whose failure have been announced in Jersey City. Eight thousand Massachusetts auto owners held policies with the company.

Although Registrar of Motor Vehicles Goodwin, when first informed of the company's failure, announced the registrations of policy holders in that company would become void, it was learned today that they were protected. Other insurance companies have taken over the Massachusetts policies of the bankrupt company.

The Federal investigation is the result of a request from Registrar Goodwin. According to reports received at the State House today the fact that 1,900 law suits against policy holders are outstanding caused the failure.

BOY INDICTED AFTER FATAL AUTO ACCIDENT

The Middlesex county grand jury today returned indictments against George E. Mercer, 17, of Cambridge, charging him with manslaughter, dangerous operation of an auto and going away after an accident. It is charged he was in an auto accident April 23, in which James F. Moore was killed.

CRIPPLE DARES DEATH IN SEA

Lorne Shea, thirty-five, a prisoner at Deer Island, who escaped from there several months ago by swimming the dangerous waters of Shirley Gut, died the prison again today.

Despite the fact that he was suffering from a dislocated shoulder, the prison authorities believe he either made his way across the waters of the Gut or was drowned in the attempt.

Shea was treated at the prison hospital at 6 a. m. today for the dislocated shoulder. Several hours later a check-up of the prisoners showed that the injured man was missing.

15 HOUSES AFIRE AT IPSWICH

Ipswich, June 7.—Fifteen houses were set on fire, three of them being destroyed in a blaze which started in the Agawan stables today and burned one horse to death.

Hamilton, Beverly, Danvers and Salem sent fire apparatus to aid the local department.

HOSPITAL SHIP CREW TOO WEAK

In an effort to combat blame that might be charged to United States steamship inspectors for permitting the Boston Floating Hospital being used for hospital purposes, G. Loring Briggs, manager of the hospital, today declared that had the ship been manned by a full crew when fire broke out it would have been saved.

Mrs. Briggs made his statement before Herman T. Parker and John Stewart, U. S. inspectors of steam vessels, who conducted an investigation of the fire. The hearing was held at the Appraisers' Stores.

Captain William E. Grover of the ship and six members of the crew, who were aboard when the fire broke out at North End pier, testified they did not know how the fire started. Captain Grover testified that a short time before the fire he saw two peters on the dock near the ship and the man was smoking. The only fire aboard the ship was inthe galley stove, he testified.

PUNCH ON NOSE IS JUST SIGN OF REAL LOVE

Herman L. Lindsay, aged 23, of Batavia street, Back Bay, whose desire to wed Mrs. Eleanor M. Flanders, Everett divorcee, became so exciting that he is alleged to have punched her on the nose and taken her diamond rings and household furnishings, still loves the lady of his choice devotedly, despite the fact that she had him arrested.

Lindsay, a steamship clerk, when arraigned in Malden district court today, confessed that he was still eager and willing to marry Mrs. Flanders.

The woman was recently granted a divorce which has not yet become final. According to her story to the police, Lindsay urged her to flee with him to New Hampshire and disregard the court ruling. She refused.

She says that Lindsay met her on the street in Everett and struck her. Then she claims he took two rings valued at $450 and later she claims he removed some of the furniture from the apartment on Newton street, Everett, where the couple planned to live after being married.

In court the case was continued until June 17.

The woman is the daughter of William Q. Huey, well-known Everett contractor. The police, it is said, have recovered the rings and the household effects.

FULLER'S BOARD STARTS STUDY OF SACCO CASE

President A. Lawrence Lowell of Harvard, President Samuel W. Stratton of Technology and former Judge Robert Grant, the Governor's "advisory board" in the Sacco-Vanzetti review, were sent transcripts today of the Vanzetti trial in Plymouth on an attempted robbery, while armed charge.

Vanzetti was convicted of an attempted holdup in Bridgewater and was sentenced to State Prison, which term he was serving up to the time he was sentenced to the electric chair with Sacco for the South Braintree holdup and murders.

Pending the recovery of Governor Fuller, who is confined to his home with a severe sore throat and cold, all appointments at the State House with Sacco-Vanzetti witnesses have been postponed. The Governor's condition showed no improvement today.

The Governor's morning mail contained but few communications on the Sacco-Vanzetti case. E. M. Carl, writing from San Antonio, Tex., says he thinks the Governor erred in listening to the clamor to appoint a reviewing commission.

Sued for $57.32, He "Flashes" 8 Cents and Goes Free

Eight cents in his pocket and a week ago he managed to take to his three children and his crippled wife only $1.75 worth of food.

That was the story told in Municipal Civil Court today by Benjamin F. Sands of Brookline, one time a prominent real estate promoter. Judge Zottoli refused to authorize his arrest on a judgment for $57.32 obtained against him.

During the course of examination, counsel for the creditor asked how much Sands had in his pocket. Slowly searching pocket after pocket, he pulled out a nickel and three pennies, his entire capital. Examination stopped abruptly.

WOMAN DYING, AUTOIST HELD AS DRUNK

Mrs. Katherine Hefferman, aged 22 of Emerson road, North Reading, is dying at the Winchester Hospital of injuries suffered when she was struck by an automobile on the Reading-Andover boulevard today and was dragged for 70 feet until the machine went over an embankment, crashed into a tree and turned over.

Daniel F. Fitzgerald, aged 55, driver of the car, was arrested on the charge of operating a motor vehicle while intoxicated and driving so as to endanger the public.

The young woman was waiting for a car to take her to her place of employment in Lawrence when she was struck by the machine. Her body was crushed as it was dragged along the boulevard. When the machine finally went off the road and turned over Fitzgerald crawled from the wreckage, hailed a passing truck and had the victim removed to the State police barracks at Reading. Later she was taken to the Winchester Hospital in the police ambulance.

Fitzgerald was arraigned in court today and was held for a further hearing next week.

...Both fliers breakfasted this morn... in a private dining room at the Hotel Ansorge, which was banked with roses and laurel and huge bunches of daisies, all the gifts of Kottbus admirers.

The breakfast table was surmounted with a cake three feet high, presented by a Kottbus housewife who spent most of her day yesterday baking this tribute to the American airmen.

At noon the two Americans appeared at the City Hall to receive honors and be made honorary citizens of Kottbus by the Mayor. Great pomp marked the ceremony.

Accompanied by Counsellor Poole of the American Embassy in Berlin, the two fliers marched in a triumphant procession through the streets of Kottbus to the City Hall.

Meanwhile groups of little girls scattered daisies before them and a cordon of Kottbus police, working as they have never worked before, battled to keep the crowds back.

In the council room of the City Hall the city fathers and all the dignitaries of Kottbus gave an official welcome to the fliers in a manner that for sincerity and heartiness cannot be outdone by Berlin or any of the larger cities waiting to welcome the men.

German Band Is Busy

The official ceremonies were conducted by the mayor of Kottbus whose English was perhaps not fluent, but what it lacked in smoothness it had in sincerity. The mayor, addressing the two fliers, said:

"In memory of your uniquely glorious achievement, the city of Kottbus, which by 1930 will look back upon a thousand years of existence, presents honorary citizenship to you heroes of the air and masters of the sea."

Counsellor Poole lifted a burden from the shoulders of Chamberlin and Levine, when he agreed to make a fitting reply for them in German, since neither American has more than a limited knowledge of the German language.

The county council presented the two new honorary citizens with two immense silver bowls and a representative of the province of Neider-

Chamberlin Under Ban as Flier in Connecticut

New Haven, Ct., June 7 (A.P.).—Clarence D. Chamberlin was banned from flying in Connecticut about three years ago by Major T. O. Freeman, head of Connecticut National Guard aviation, and Clarence Knox, now State Aviation Commissioner.

The ban was imposed after Chamberlin had flown low over the Yale Bowl while a football game was in progress, and has not been lifted.

It was declared that Chamberlin's actions at the Bowl demonstrated he was "not a fit pilot" and he was told to stay out of the State.

Two weeks later he appeared in Hartford at an air meet. Officials refused to let him participate. His plane, however, in the hands of another pilot, won a large silver cup.

CHAMBERLIN'S OWN STORY

As the men feasted on broiled salmon and potatoes, washed down with real beer, they chatted animatedly of their nerve-wracking and thrilling battle with the elements.

Chamberlin said:

"The fog was so bad after we passed the Mauretania that it was almost impossible for us to be seen or for us to see anyone. After we circled the Mauretania we encountered a storm but we had power enough to breast it and kept on an eastward course, escaping the storm. The fog again became so thick and the night so dark that I had no idea how I was going on my course.

"I finally decided to go above the fog and stay there until morning. So we went above 11,000 feet and found the fog everywhere. Then we went even higher.

"I steered east, knowing that if I went on that course long enough we were bound to hit land.

"When the sun finally came out we dropped down through the clouds and lo and behold we were over a large coast city which I took to be Bremen. It may have been Boulogne. Anyhow, I knew there were about five or six big factories underneath.

"Then we tried to steer by our map and our map was good. I know absolutely nothing about the way Germany looks from the air.

"I am not very tired. I'm only a little bit sleepy. We really did not sleep at all, although we relieved each other at the stick.

"It was impossible to really sleep. We only succeeded in getting a few short catnaps. We didn't eat very much either. I found it better to do without eating or sleeping and carry the whole thing through on reserve strength."

Levine expressed astonishment that Mrs. Levine had swooned when the Columbia soared off Roosevelt Field in New York. He said:

"I didn't know that she did that. I saw that she had a worried look on her face, but I didn't know it would affect her so violently. But you know if I had told her I could never have made the trip. She wouldn't have let me, and that would have crabbed the whole party.

"I am surprised to learn that we were not sighted oftener. Of course we knew that the Mauretania had seen us, and knew who we were, for we could see them throwing hats and things in the air and dancing around on the decks. We knew the Mauretania had a powerful radio and would flash it back that we had got across the ocean all right.

"The wind was against us 75 per cent. of the way. When we struck the heavy fog bank we had to go 22,000 feet high. I can tell you that it was not comfortable.

"On account of our detour, which we made to avoid the storm centres, our gas ran out just at the moment when Berlin was within our grasp.

30 Stars Missing In U. S. Flag at Kottbus

Kottbus, June 7 (I.N.S.).—There was much ado in Kottbus today, when the city fathers decided that the proper thing for the Chamberlin-Levine reception at the City Hall was an American flag draped over the balcony. Not a single American flag was to be found in Kottbus, but Kottbus is a town of resourcefulness. A seamstress was commissioned to emulate Betsy Ross to make an American flag and to make it quickly.

The seamstress did her best but the time allotted her was not sufficient and the American flag that draped the balcony of the City Hall was shy just thirty stars.

BELLANCA AIR LINE TO EUROPE

New York, June 7 (A.P.)—A company to build multi-motored airplanes, each capable of carrying "not less than 40 passengers" to Europe, on a commercial basis, is being organized by Giuseppe M. Bellanca, designer of the craft that carried Clarence D. Chamberlin and Charles A. Levine to Germany.

Mr. Bellanca said the financial backing for the project has been assured.

"The experimental work on the plane will cost $175,000," he said. "The planes themselves, probably of the biplane type, will cost in production about $30,000 apiece, exclusive of the motors, and we can't say yet how many motors there will be."

"The total flying time from New York to Paris will be 32 hours," he continued. "There will be a stop at Newfoundland and another at the Azores, where gas will be taken on, bringing the total traveling time to 36 hours.

"My planes will have a cruising speed of 120 miles an hour. There will be room to walk around, comfortable chairs to lounge in and comfortable berths to sleep in. There will be no hazard and no uncertainty about it."

Firemen Aid Girl in Accident

Miss Esther Elkins, 19, of Division street, Chelsea, severely bruised two fingers of her right hand when caught in a folding elevator door in a Federal street building today. After treatment at the Relief Hospital she was taken home.

Will Not Fly Home

"The citizens of Kottbus appreciate this honor and wish to show their appreciation," said the mayor. "We not only want to make our distinguished guests comfortable but we wish to honor them as well."

Asked if they would attempt to fly back home, Levine, emphatically said "no."

This same sentiment was echoed by Chamberlin.

"We would not attempt anything like that. We demonstrated our ability to fly over the Atlantic, but we have no intention of trying to fly back. I do not know what the future program will be. That will be decided upon when we reach Berlin, but we will not try to fly home."

While Levine is not a full-fledged aviator, it was learned that he gives Chamberlin a great deal of assistance on the trip. When the gong was good Levine took the controls and held the plane on its course while Chamberlin got a respite from the task.

Ate Little on Trip

A remarkable circumstance was that neither man got very hungry on the long trip. They had much of their food left over. It was learned, also, that the fliers had sacrificed part of their fuel. When the going got heavy some of the tins containing gasoline were thrown overboard to lighten the load.

Feeding the machine with gasoline was the chief task, especially while the plane was crossing the Atlantic.

Mussolini Congratulates Fletcher on Columbia Hop

Rome, June 7 (A.P.).—Premier Mussolini today sent a message of congratulations to American Ambassador Fletcher on the trans-Atlantic flight of the Bellanca plane, "Columbia." The Premier referred with pride to the fact that the plane had been designed and constructed by Guiseppe Bellanca, who was born in Sicily. He said:

"By this second and marvelous flight the wings of the United States have undoubtedly been carried to the top of the world of aviation, and the names of Lindbergh and Chamberlin will remain forever imprinted in the history of great hardships conquering the way to new cycles of civilization."

Chamberlin Says He Flew 4,400 Miles

Kottbus, June 7 (A.P.).—Clarence Chamberlin has been too busy since his arrival here to figure out the distance covered by the Columbia, he said today, but estimates that the flight from Roosevelt Field to Eisleben and then to Klinge, near here, totalled 4,400 miles.

German Air League experts believe he covered 7,050 kilometres, or a fraction over 4,722 miles, on the basis of the route taken after passing the Irish coast.

Until the figures are definitely confirmed, Chamberlin will not lay claim to having exceeded Colonel Lindbergh's flight in point of distance covered.

Kottbus Congratulates Coolidge and America

Kottbus, Germany, June 7 (A.P.).—The municipality of Kottbus today dispatched a message to President Coolidge saying:

"Amid the rousing enthusiasm of its citizenry, Kottbus lovingly folds Chamberlin and Levine, heroes of the air and ocean, in its arms, and felicitates you, Mr. President, as well as the American people, who have reason to be proud of their sons."

CHAMBERLIN IS GREAT PILOT, SAYS LINDY

he could make a longer voyage, Lindbergh replied with characteristic modesty:

"The Bellanca plane always could have made a long cruise. When I landed at Le Bourget I could have gone from 500 to 1,000 miles farther, but I had intended to stop at Paris. The Bellanca plane already had shown it could make a long flight.

"Chamberlin deserves great credit. I have sent him my personal congratulations. The plane, the motor and the man were all good."

Lindbergh strolled about and chatted with Benjamin Mahoney, builder of "The Spirit of St. Louis."

Mahoney likewise has shown keen interest in the transatlantic flight of Chamberlin.

"It was a splendid feat," he said. "Chamberlin had a fine plane and a good motor. I am glad he made it."

Captain Fried of the liner President Roosevelt had sent a radiogram asking the position of the Memphis and explaining that the 500 passengers on his ship were anxious to have him altar his course to pass close enough to the cruiser so they could get a glimpse of Lindbergh. However, a fog settled down and the passengers on the President Roosevelt were disappointed.

The passenger liner Christobal Colon, which happened to be in the vicinity, sent a radio message of greetings to "the glorious aviator."

Lindbergh is getting a trifle restless. He wants to fly. He expressed a desire to fly from the deck of the Memphis in one of the two naval scout planes that the Memphis carries. These planes take off by being catapulted. It was found, however, that the crate containing "The Spirit of St. Louis" was in the way and Lindbergh's wish could not be gratified.

He is enjoying the trip and has not been seasick for a minute. He is in fine health and is looking forward keenly to getting home.

Wives of Fliers Sail as Guests of Germany

New York, June 7 (I.N.S.).—Mrs. Clarence D. Chamberlin and Mrs. Charles A. Levine sailed from Hoboken today upon the German liner Berlin as guests of the German government to greet their husbands.

A crowd of more than 6,000 gathered around the pier. Their cabins were filled with flowers and littered with messages of congratulation.

As the Berlin drew out from her pier, craft in the harbor gave ear-splitting blasts from their sirens.

CHARGES MOVE TO KILL SMALL MILK DEALERS

Charges that the big milk dealers are trying to drive the "small fellows" out of business, were made at a hearing today on proposed new pasteurization rules before Health Commissioner George H. Bigelow at the State House.

A rule calling for the reservation of a separate room to be devoted entirely to the heating, cooling and bottling of milk, met with the greatest opposition.

William P. Nickerson, chairman of the Norwood Board of Health, contended the separate room would create a hardship for the small dealer and might drive him out of business. [illegible] member of the U. S. Shipping Board, said:

"The big dealers in Boston want [illegible] such a regulation to drive the small dealer out," he asserted.

T he new regulations will become effective July 14.

"Evidence" Explodes as Rum Owner Is Sent to Jail

While a sack full of "white mule" beat a tattoo of explosions in East Cambridge Court today, Joseph Rivers, thirty-two, alleged owner, was sentenced to six months and fined $300. He appealed. The loaded sack had been taken into court as evidence against Rivers. Cambridge police testified it was found in his home. Hardly had th ectrial begun when the first explosion occurred, followed by the rat-tat-tat of more popping corks.

Ruth Snyder Tells Her Story of Judd Gray

CHAPTER 13

By RUTH BROWN SNYDER

Copyright, 1927, King Features Syndicate Inc.

I BELIEVE many people who are and remain good are just lucky in that they haven't had the opportunities thrust upon them to bring out in them the human frailties and weaknesses under which so many of us let the good in us be swamped.

This is not a preliminary to a plea for myself. The subject of my discussion today is one of whom you have heard—Judd Gray.

I owe him no favors. All that the world knows today of him is what he told on the witness stand—so it doesn't know much and much of what it knows is false, because Judd lied.

But, in those many hours of calm and restful love, when we told one another oh, so many things—about childhood, about what was in our minds and our hearts, when we spoke of flowers Judd told me of many chapters in his life.

You have heard of Judd Gray's wife, child, friend, Harry Folsom; girlfriend, Ruth Snyder, but you never heard much about his mother, his father. I have written about my childhood—but no one has yet written about his.

Judd was born in New Jersey. His father was in the building business in a small way. They were prosperous. His mother was either a school teacher or a governess.

HAD A GOOD MIND.

If he had any brothers or sisters, he never told me or them. I think he had none.

He was born puny, weak, not well. He had bad eyes from childhood. He wore glasses when he was a kid—the boys teased him and called him "Four Eyes."

Never muscular, powerful or vigorous, he still had a certain instinct for self-protection. He knew he couldn't fight the other boys, outrun them, conquer them by force. So he began to develop in his high-strung, sensitive, temperamental framework another line of defense, to get him quality and in time win him superiority.

He had a mind. He had amazing concentration and, though the term may sound almost gruesome in view of what developed, he had what the world calls "character."

That is, he was proud. Pride cometh before a fall—true enough. But it cometh, also, before a success. It is the dominating motivating "ego" that makes us do things beyond mere living.

Judd was a proud little fellow from the start. He couldn't fight off those who kicked him and threw him, but he didn't like it. So he plotted how to get the best of them. He had imagination—plenty! He had a persuasive "line"—oh, how well I, of all people, know that!

So he came to a turning point where he dominated with the mental and spiritual.

Judd wasn't handsome, not even fair looking. But, wherever I wept whether he was known or strange people deferred to him. He had importance."

If he hadn't got caught as he was he might have risen to commanding power. Peggy Hopkins Joyce, in her review of me, said I lacked "It." Nobody ever said that of Judd. He was "It" with a capital "I" and a capital "T". He had more than "It"—he had "Those," because he held it through so many situations and conditions. The man was a marvel at getting instant attention and going through with what he set out after.

He went to work for his father after he had a high school course and, I believe, a couple of years at a freshwater college. He left liver because athletics were the dominant feature there, and at that he was a dub. He became a salesman. And how nature cut him out for that!

He sold insalment plan houses for his father. But his father was one person that Judd couldn't "sell." The father had all the inside angle on him. So he cut loose for himself. He told me later that he had never been turned down for a job in his life, had never been discharged, had never asked for a raise. What he was other people made him, and not for his asking—because he made them do it. I know—I was one of them, as the world will tell you. He told me what the others made him. He told you what I made him. You know what he made of me.

VERY PERSUASIVE.

He was the most spontaneously persuasive human being I ever met.

He left no asset out. He couldn't change his face or his figure, but he was the best dressed man that I ever met. He set off what he had to its greatest advantage. Even on the stand, when he was lying, I couldn't help admiring his get-up, his poses, his attitudes and his choice of words. He had the judge, the jury and the situation sized up, and he played on it like a master fiddler on a violin of as many strings.

Yes, you may have guessed it by now—I loved him with all my heart and all my soul and all the rest. Whether you have or not guessed this—I still do. He cost me everything and I still love him. If you have failed to entirely understand the real and honest story of Ruth Brown Snyder's ruin, read this paragraph again—it's almost all there.

Why should a man have been born and made so fascinating, and yet so fatal?

What a power, what a tower of good, of grace, he could have been! If a man could make a comparatively unemotional woman like me turn into what you know I am, can you imagine what he could have accomplished had he used the power he controlled toward saving me instead of wrecking me?

BETTY ALDEN'S COMMENT ON SOCIETY HAPPENINGS

Miss Ethel Cummings Marries John Malcolm Forbes on June 25

WHATEVER OTHER SOCIAL attractions crowd the arena, June remains pre-eminently the brides, as the month for marrying and giving in marriage. The charming creatures bear in anticipation the peals of wedding bells, and spend their days hectically engaged in momentous decisions—of "what" to wear and whom to have for attendants. Miss Ethel Cummings, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles K. Cummings of Joy street, has selected for her train a most interesting group.

NATURALLY THE CLAN OF Paine is to be well represented when this granddaughter of a "Signer" exchanges one distinguished Boston cognomen for another equally illustrious. When she becomes Mrs. John Malcolm Forbes, on June 25, young kinswomen and "dearest" friends will be about equally represented in the slowly moving processional. Those fitting into the first category are Mrs. Charles K. Cummings, Jr., the former Miss Betty Russell; Mrs. Francis Cummings, who was Miss Eleanor Goodwin; Mrs. George Lyman Paine, Jr., who was Miss Ruth Forbes, and Miss Margaret Cummings, sister of the bride-elect.

THEN THERE IS ALSO MISS EVELYN CUMMINGS, in the honor place as chief attendant. The "dearest" friends are Miss Faith Ward of Milton, Miss Frances Sturgis, Miss Helen Chandler and Mrs. William E. Poole, the latter of Philadelphia. Altogether it will be a most unusual cortege of bride attendants, and of course the wedding will be far and away the largest and most important nuptial of the month of brides and roses.

TRINITY'S DIM SPACES WILL be more than filled, on the last Saturday of the bridal month, with a company of utmost distinction. Miss Olivia Ames' wedding, on June 18, is of equal importance, although the wedding company is smaller. Miss Ames elects to wed with Henry C. Cabot, Jr., out in Unity Church, that is near the country estate of her parents, the Oliver Ameses, in North Easton. And Bostonians whose blood is the azure hue, and possessing assured places in the social scheme, will be in attendance.

DRESS REHEARSAL FOR tomorrow's Pageant at "Weld" went on yesterday beneath a sky of cloudless blue. Powers that be for the Pageant are invoking the gods for just such another perfect day tomorrow. Mrs. Larz Anderson is opening her lovely place for the spectacle which wends its pictorial way through the Willow Walk to unfold itself about the garden enclosure that might be a bit of "the glory that was Greece" set down at Weld, so hoary with age and lichen covered is it. For such a Pageant there's no more romantic setting hereabouts than "Weld" affords.

"PERDITA" AND "ROSALIND," "Viola" and "Juliet," "Cordelia" and "Ophelia" are being done in the "Spirit of Repertory" Episode of the Pageant, which is in its entirety arranged by Bangs Burgess, the Repertory Episode, however, being from the pen of Leighton Rollins. Every professional woman is interested generally, and young feminine society especially, in the "Repertory Episode," to which Miss Katharine Chapman Warren reads the prologue. Miss Rachel Derby Smith is a perfect blonde Juliet," and the others who fill the Shakespearean roles to the delight of the eye are Miss Sylvia Shippen, Miss Eleanor Hesseltine, Miss Elinor Baker, Miss Janet Conway and Miss Eleanor Collier.

ELEANOR HESSELTINE

WORLD AVIATOR LEAGUE HONORS W. R. HEARST

By HENRY CAVENDISH.
Universal Cable Dispatch.

Paris, June 7.—William Randolph Hearst has been made honorary president of the American section of the International League of Aviators.

The action followed cable correspondence between Clifford B. Harmon, president of the League, and Mr. Hearst.

Mr. Harmon today sent Mr. Hearst a cable informing him that he had been enthusiastically and unanimously accepted as honorary president of the American section and extending to him the thanks of the directors for his agreement to act in such capacity.

Mr. Harmon cabled:

"After a very successful luncheon to Lindbergh by the League and to the executive committee, you were unanimously and unanimously elected president of the American section. We believe that this league can be made the biggest factor for the happiness and safety of the entire world. The League is received with enthusiasm in all countries. We now have twenty sections registered. Thanks."

U. S. DELEGATES TO GENEVA ARE OUTNUMBERED

By JAMES T. WILLIAMS, JR.

Washington, June 6.—America will be outnumbered at the Geneva naval conference by more than two to one unless President Coolidge orders the American delegation to be enlarged before he leaves a week from today for the Black Hills of South Dakota.

Meantime the President has officially announced the names of the American delegation. Here is the list as it now stands officially:

American Ambassador to Belgium Hugh R. Gibson and Rear Admiral Hilary P. Jones, chief delegates. They will be assisted by Rear Admiral Thomas Long, Captains Henry Schofield, Adolphus Andrews, Commander W. W. Smith, Commander Henry C. Train and Lieutenant Commander H. H. Frost, as naval experts. G. A. Gordon, counselor of the legation at Budapest; Fred R. Wolbarg, counselor of the legation at Berne and Allen Dulles of the State Department will act as advisers in framing treaties. Hugh R. Wilson, recently named American Minister to Switzerland, will act as secretary general to the conference.

Members of the Diplomatic Corps here find it hard to believe the richest country in the world is too poor to pay for a delegation as large as those Japan and Great Britain are sending.

Senators and Representatives deny Congress is to blame for such a predicament. One of these said today it was absurd to plead lack of money, as there are contingent funds available, and that Congress would gladly make up at its next session any deficit that the administration might incur.

SHIP ARRIVES HERE WITH FOUR STRICKEN SAILORS

Four Norwegian sailors, members of the crew of the Norwegian steamship Polarland, today were taken off the ship at quarantine for further examination, when Dr. A. R. Sweeney, public health officer, discovered a small epidemic aboard ship, believed to be influenza. Captain Tanderaas, master of the vessel, reported the men became ill several days ago and he himself had been affected until yesterday. The Polarland arrived with a cargo taken on at the British West Indies for the Merrimac Chemical Company of Everett.

$12,000,000 HEIRESS PROVIDENCE MAN'S BRIDE

Paris, June 7 (U.S.S.)—The marriage of Miss Marjorie Knox $12,000,000 Buffalo heiress and J. Hazard Campbell of Providence, took place today in the office of the Mayor of the eighth arrondissement. The civil service was private, only the bride's mother, Mrs. Seymour Horace Knox, and the bride's sister and her husband, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Henry Goodyear, and several intimate friends being present.

The religious ceremony will be held this afternoon at the American Pro-Cathedral.

MRS. E. W. HARRIMAN IS OPERATED UPON

Harriman, N. Y., June 7 A.P.)—Mrs. E. W. Harriman, widow of the railroad builder, and one of the country's richest women, was operated on today here at her country home for appendicitis.

REV. FRANK A. STRATTON DIES IN MELROSE HOME

The Rev. Frank A. Stratton, Civil War chaplain and one of the oldest Methodist ministers in New England, died at his home in Melrose today in his ninety-fourth year.

REAL SUMMER WEATHER NEAR!

After almost three months of experimentation with Spring temperatures, rainstorms and adverse winds, the local Weather Man today was prepared to offer to the New England public the first taste of his 1927 brand of Summer.

The delectable morsel was served early today to all districts in a wide path from the Atlantic Coast to Kansas and Oklahoma, with no indications on the map that rain would spoil its flavor.

Fair tonight and Wednesday; not much change in temperature; moderate westerly winds.

HINGHAM GRADE CROSSING CALLED DEATH TRAP

The removal of gate tenders from the grade crossing on Fort Hill street, Hingham, three years ago, has made the spot a veritable death trap, according to residents of the district, who assert that the red light, the only safeguard for automobiles passing over the tracks, is insufficient.

Furthermore, they declare, the light functions only part time and there are many nights when there is not the slightest warning of approaching trains.

The road is heavily travelled during the Summer season, being used as a short cut from High street to Fresh River avenue by motorists travelling to and from the Cape.

F. D. Manuel, whose home is located only a few feet from the perilous crossing, stated that the road is poorly lighted and made doubly dangerous by the heavy foliage which shuts off the view of approaching trains.

NO SUBSTITUTE BELL.

"Cars speeding through here after dark have hardly any warning before they reach the tracks," said Mr. Manuel. "The red light, which can be sighted only a few yards away, is very often out of order and there is no bell to be used as a substitute.

"Crossing tenders were kept busy flagging cars at this point until three years ago when they were removed. Traffic through the street has almost tripled since and it seems like criminal negligence to allow the danger to exist."

Reports of dangerous grade crossings in Hingham and scores of other New England cities and towns have resulted in wide-spread condemnation of the present condition.

MINIMIZE ACCIDENTS.

Major Paul Hines, secretary-manager of the Boston Automobile Club, A. A. A. whose objective this year is to minimize accidents on the high ways, declared that immediate action should be taken by every municipality in New England to curb the grade crossing menace.

"The only time that any great public interest is shown in highway safety precautions," he says, "is after there has been a tragedy involving great economic loss and the sorrowing of several homes. Then we hear 'we ought to do this and we ought to do that.' A short time later all the good intentions are forgotten.

"The only way the present railroad crossing menace can be remedied is through the city and town fathers of every municipality in New England meeting immediately, recognizing that the danger exists and taking action to end it.

"Let's have less talk and more action."

The Boston Evening American is anxious to reduce this peril as much as possible and calls on the public to help.

If you have any grade crossing in your neighborhood or elsewhere which you consider unnecessarily hazardous, or if you have had a personal experience, kindly forward such information to the Grade Crossing Editor of the Boston Evening American, No. 5 Winthrop square, Boston.

'WETS' PLOT TO DESTROY U. S., SAYS M'ADOO

Greenville, Tenn., June 7 (A.P.).—A challenge to political leaders of all parties to make known their stand on prohibition was sounded here today by William G. McAdoo, Democratic presidential nomination candidate in 1924, with a warning that efforts to nullify the eighteenth amendment are part of a movement menacing the foundations of popular government.

Addressing the students of Tusculum College at Commencement exercises, the former Secretary of the Treasury declared the prohibition question presents a vital issue that responsible statesmanship cannot ignore. He called for courageous leadership such as Andrew Jackson might display.

PART OF DEEP PLOT.

"The attack on the eighteenth amendment," he said, "is but a part of a great movement which menaces all that is most American in our institutions. It is the fighting front of a conflict that is deeper than the liquor question. The conflict is, Shall the Constitution be nullified or shall it be enforced?

"The last few years have witnessed a widespread revival and resurgence of corrupt machine politics. As the attention of the people has become more and more engrossed in their private affairs, their vigilance has relaxed and the old political machines which have held many of our cities in their grip since the days of Boss Tweed in New York and the Gas House Ring in Philadelphia have taken advantage of the opportunity to renew their power.

"In two national campaigns they have disrupted and paralyzed one of our great political parties. The signs of their activity are all about us.

"They are apparent in the startling corruptions and frauds which have marked the senatorial campaigns and elections in several states.

"They are apparent in the effort of great municipal bosses to set themselves up as president makers.

"But the most dangerous of all, the rising influence of machine politics is seen in the increase of crime and lawlessness and in the concerted attack on the Eighteenth amendment."

W. W. BREWSTER, KIN OF THE ELDER, DEAD

Plymouth, June 7 (A.P.).—William W. Brewster, direct descendant of Elder Brewster of Pilgrim fame and leading business man of this town, died here last night.

Official of Auto Club Praises American

Major Paul Hines, secretary-manager of the Boston Automobile Club, writes the Boston Evening American as follows concerning the grade crossing situation:

"The Boston Automobile Club congratulates the Boston Evening American upon its interest and effort in the railroad crossing problem. It is only through such campaigns that effective safety results can be obtained. Mold public sentiment in favor of greater safety precautions at the railroad crossings and the proper authorities will soon supply the remedy."

Love's Madness

"HE TRIED TO GRAB ME IN HIS ARMS. Enraged, I flung him off, but he had been drinking and—"

IT WAS in a fragrant garden under a summer's moon that Lorraine gave her heart into George Miller's keeping. Never were two young souls more rapturously happy. Through eyes of love they looked into a future sweet with the promise of joy and content.

Then like a shattering blow came the call to war, the agony of parting—and their mutual vows to remain faithful and true.

But Fate plays strange tricks on the unwary, as Lorraine was to learn when the handsome, fascinating, devil-may-care Captain Stephens came into her life.

At first she accepted his attentions simply as a welcome diversion from the strain and uncertainty of those weary months of war. Had she foreseen the terrible disaster that lay just ahead, she might have saved herself untold misery and suffering.

As it was, she went blindly ahead until one night she found herself entangled in a most fearful adventure. Before she could think or act, she became like a bit of helpless driftwood, lashed and driven by the fury of the storm.

And that was only the beginning. The fear, the anguish, the pathetic hopelessness of the days that followed are completely and grippingly described by Lorraine in "My Soldier Lover"—one of the sixteen big features in July True Story Magazine. Don't miss it!

(Above)—SHE LOOKED SO INNOCENT—Yet she was the only girl in town to whom nobody spoke, who had no friends, and who was thought of as evil by everyone. But buried deep in her heart was a secret that, had it been revealed, would have made her enemies cringe at her feet. Her story, "Sacrifice and Shame" in July True Story is one you will never forget.

(Above) "SHE ROSE BEWILDERED, FRIGHTENED"—He loved her with an all-consuming love—but if he told her the truth about himself, she would surely forsake him. The peril of a marriage built upon deceit is dramatically proved in this gripping story, "Playing Square," in July True Story.

The Most Heart-Stirring Stories Ever Told

A LITERARY novice once came to a great master and asked: "Where shall I find material for the kind of stories that stir men's souls?" And the master replied: "Look into your own heart!"

Every man, every woman, may dip into his or her own heart and find stories more thrilling, more inspiring, than any that come from the fictionist's pen.

Life itself is the great creator of drama—the drama of love and hate, of joy and sorrow, of folly and repentance, of human error and tragedy.

And so it is out of the depths of human experience that True Story draws its fund of dramatic, soul-stirring narratives—stories that grip the imagination, tug at the heart-strings and paint a convincing picture of life. These are the real epics of adventure and romance—in which the characters are not mere puppets born of a fanciful mind—but living personalities who have been at grips with life, and are writing from experience.

That is why True Story is the favorite Magazine among over eight million readers. Its narratives throb with vitality. They have the stamp of truth. In them the reader lives with the writer the eternal drama of love and marriage, of temptation and struggle, of success and failure, of laughter and tears.

In the July issue of True Story, for example, there are sixteen gripping, profoundly absorbing features—each one of them a true record of human experience.

If you are not a regular reader of True Story Magazine, start with the July issue—now on sale at all newsstands. A revelation awaits you. Get your copy today.

"I FELT LIKE A CRIMINAL"—With her one chance for happiness hanging in the balance, Madge was forced to choose between the selfish pride of a mother who demanded all, and the love of a good man who wanted to give all. "Did It Pay," in July True Story, is a deeply moving recital of a girl's big mistake.

(Above)—TRAPPED, SHE RECOILED IN FEAR—An innocent girl, having her first taste of freedom, Emily was to learn that there is more to real love than honeyed words and passionate embraces. Don't miss "My Wrecked Romance." (July issue of True Story.)

"I'LL GET YOU YET"—How a lifetime of misery may grow from a single act of folly is seen in the pathetic story of a girl who tried to build happiness on a lie. The terrible nightmare of events that come crashing into her life is vividly described in "The Curse of Suspicion," one of the most heart-stirring stories ever printed in True Story Magazine.

3 ARRESTED IN LIVERMORE ROBBERY

more and Ritz-Carlton robberies that totalled $193,000 in cash and jewels.

"Boston Billy" Williams is declared to be the leader, with Arthur Barry, alias Arthur G. Gibson, alias Arthur Cummings, of Worcester, and William Owens of Philadelphia as aides.

The police also believe that as the result of the "gentleman robber" Barry's arrest with a woman and his offer to confess if the woman were released, they have located virtually all the loot in a New York safety deposit vault.

Almost identical in gentle technique with the methods employed by the Hub's "polite bandit" were those of Barry, the "gentleman rober," who invaded the Long Island home of Jesse Livermore, Wall Street operator, in the night, awoke the Livermores and their guests, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Aronsohn, and suavely relieved them of cash and jewels.

As he conversed, first with the Aronsohns and then with the Livermores in another bedroom, Barry sorid out the loot and handed back certain valuable pieces of jewelry to one or another of the robbed when they told him of sentimental attachments for the pieces.

In assuring Mrs. Livermore that he was the burglar in her home, Barry today reminded her that when she had expressed a wish for a cigarette during the robbery, he had produced one, placed it between her lips and lighted it.

Barry has been wanted in Worcester and in Bridgeport, Ct., as a fugitive from justice since the Fall of 1922, when he escaped from the Fairfield County (Ct.) jail, where he was serving an assault sentence for killing one Peter Warner in a Bridgeport dance hall fight over a girl.

In Worcester he is wanted for auto stealing.

When arrested on Long Island with a woman known as "Mrs. King," the young robber had with him a bag containing nearly $15,000 worth of gems and jewelry, identified later as part of the Livermore loot.

Barry said in his confession that an underworld charcter from Boston, called "Boston Billy" Williams, took the jewelry and promised to split it three ways. As a result of Barry's story, Owens was arrested in Philadelphia.

CONFESSES HE AND PAL SLEW 9 IN TAMPA

Tampa, Fla., June 7 (A.P.)—N. F. Levins, confessed slayer of Mr. and Mrs. Herman Merrell and three of their children, has admitted it was he who killed Bee Rowell and three members of the Rowall household here last Summer, officers announced.

Levins, a fisherman, implicated Leonard Thompson, who was arrested with him in connection with the Merrell case ten days ago.

In a "full confession" police said, Levins assumed responsibility for the deaths of six persons, but charged Thompson with the clubbing to death of the three Merrell children.

Levins said he killed C. H. Alexander with an axe last June, following an argument "over a woman." Then, to "cover up," he killed Bee Rowell, in whose home Alexander lived, and Rowell's mother and daughter, Mrs. Caroline Rowell, 94, and Eva Rowell, 15.

Leaving Tampa, Levins said, he traveled about from place to place, working as a laborer, until he returned here recently. He then met Thompson, he said, and declared it was Thompson who persuaded him to murder Edward Rowell, a brother of Bee, in order that there might be no one to testify against him in the event he was charged with the murders. Meanwhile, however, Edward Rowell had moved to another homestead and Levins was unaware, he declared, that the Merrells lived in the home on the night the two men went there. Five were killed, three children, who were away, escaping.

Shackled Souls by ELENORE MEHERIN
Author of "Chickie"

Story of a Girl Who Asked That Life Should Pay Her in Full

Roen Ross, on a vacation in Gloucester, meets Michael Scott, care free college lad. After a month of youthful romance Roen returns to her job in a Kilby street insurance office, the love of a lifetime flaming in her heart. She has promised to marry Michael when his five-year course at Cornell is finished. Roen is the sole support of her invalid mother, "Dearie," and her winsome young brother, "Jackie." Then her employer, James Burton, offers marriage. Dearie, the fragile mother, urges acceptance. Roen cannot relinquish Michael, whom she promises to marry as soon as he is earning $150. The World War comes; Michael's favorite brother is killed. Michael enlists. On the day set for their wedding Michael is ordered off with his regiment. He is gassed in action, returned to America, where he gets a magnificent opportunity as geologist for an oil concern in South America. He urges Roen to join him at once. Dearie's illness forces her to refuse. Michael goes alone. The following Spring he is sent home on business. He cables Roen that she must marry him then. She promises. She stands at the New York pier the day of his arrival. A coffin is wheeled from the lower deck. Michael had died in quarantine that morning.

(NOW GO ON WITH STORY)

THEY had lost each other in a fog.

He was near, but she could not see him. He spoke. She couldn't hear. Soon the beloved hand would reach out—seize hers. The dear voice breaking with relief would cry: "Oh, it's you! There all the time? How you frightened me!" And they would laugh in the gladness of each other's arms and the folly of tears sparkling in the sunshine.

She was driven to walk. Jackie fallowed her, saw her stop abruptly. She turned and said softly, "He's dead! Jackie, did I tell you that he's dead?" She touched her fingers on the buttons of his coat, wishing to be sure that something existed, something was real. She said, pleadingly, incoherently. "Michael is dead. I can't believe it, Jackie, think of that—Michael dead."

"Yes," said he with a white pinched look of his young boyish mouth. "He's dead, Ron. And we ought to be there. There may be things to be done."

She had not heard. She now stooped and whispered—tremulous, wild: "Michael, I did this! I let you go. Michael I sent you from me."

She said forlornly: "Where are you now?—Michael, can you hear? I would go now—anywhere! Why did I not—why did I not?"

In every grief there is this eating bitterness—this said, fruitless torture of remorse. He called. I did not hear. He needed me. I was away. I failed . . . Had I done this or that he would have stayed He would be with me now—

She visioned Michael in America from the front—arriving there weak and wounded. Then he sent her that demanding letter. She must come. Oh, if she could only have known the desperateness of his need.

So he had died alone. He had cried knowing that he would meet her—dead.

She would come back from these visions to tell herself in the chill quiet of many nights: "Dead. Oh, Michael, you are dead—"

She would sit up and fling out her arms. She would think of him on the homeward journey—lying in his berth shivering with those assaulting chills. . . . Oh, that she had been there to comfort him—oh, that he had lived but a moment with his dear eyes turned to hers—

She talked to the young purser who came to Boston. He was the last, who had seen Michael alive.

It's Easy to Get $500 Rough Rider Prize

TODAY IS THE TIME TO ACT

If You Haven't Gone After Award a Little Speed Will Help

Letters on "The Rough Riders" are coming in pretty fast and you had better begin on yours now if you want to get acquainted with the $500 cash awards to be given by the Boston Evening American for the best effort.

It's absurdly easy to be a winner when you consider the simple rules of the contest. Somebody is going to get the first prize of $250, somebody the second, which is $100, and five other persons will share, with $50 and $25 awards. Why not you?

"The Rough Riders," a vivid film of the Spanish-American War, is now playing at the Fenway Theatre. Go to see it, learn something of the story of the Rough Riders and then write your letter telling of your conception of the Rough Riders and their history.

The letter which is in the opinion of the Rough Rider Editor the best, not only in its content, but in neatness as well, will win the first cash prize, all other things being equal. Age of the contestant is a factor, so that if you are under 21, write that fact.

Any resident of New England may enter the contest except employes of Hearst newspapers and auxiliary services. The contest continues for two weeks, and the announcement of the winners follows shortly after.

Get into this "Rough Rider" competition now. At least start your letter—it won't be hard to finish it. Then wait. You may be considerably the richer for your efforts.

SCENE FROM THE 'ROUGH RIDERS'

THESE TWO ARE FRIENDLY ENEMIES

In the picture Noah Beery and George Bancroft are anything but friendly, but off the screen they are good friends. Both are featured in the picture at the Fenway. Beery as Sheriff Hells Bells and Bancroft as Happy Joe, an escaped prisoner who enlists under Roosevelt.

7 GIRLS IN 1927 TECH CLASS

Army and Navy Officers Are Among 3,000 at Commencement for 573 Graduates

Government officials, high officers of the United States Army and Navy and more than 3,000 friends and relatives thronged duPont Court, at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, today, when President Samuel W. Stratton awarded degrees to 573 candidates at the sixty-first commencement exercises.

Among those awarded degrees of master of science were seven girls. The girls and the courses in which they won their degrees are: Katherine Buckingham, Chevy Chase, Md., architecture; Harriett Whitney Allen, Durham, N. H., electrical engineering; Elizabeth Alice Birge, Boston, chemical engineering; Dorothy Quiggle, Boston, chemical engineering; Emily May Bixby, North Andover, without classification; Katherine Rand, Needham, without classification, and Natalie Cade, Niantic, Ct., electrical engineering.

ALDRED IS ORATOR.

The Commencement oration was delivered by John E. Aldred, international banker, who established the department of municipal and industrial research at Tech.

The procession was led by President Stratton, who had as his escort Colonel Alexander Macomber. Mr. Aldred, the commencement orator, was attended by Professor Charles M. Spofford, chairman of the faculty. Then came Bishop William Lawrence, escorted by Professor Harry M. Goodwin, dean of graduate students.

Major-General Preston Brown, commanding the First Corps Area of the United States Army, was escorted by Colonel H. C. Clark, head of the department of military science at Tech. Admiral Phillip Andrews, commander of the Boston Navy Yard, was attended by Professor J. R. Jack, head of the department of naval architecture.

HEADS SENIOR CLASS.

The long line of candidates for degrees was led by the president of the senior class, James A. Lyles of Canton, Ct.

Among those who were awarded the degree of doctor of philisophy are William Fitch Cheney, Jr., of Oakland, Cal.; Joseph Eleman Bernhardt of Atlanta, Ga.; Ernest Hamilton Huntress of Melrose; George Henri Lemaitre of Brussels, Belgium; Robert Watkeys Mitchell of Winthrop; William Clifford Morse of Mississippi; Helmuth Gustav Richard Schneider of Bloomfontein, South Africa and George Raymond Tucker of North Andover.

James Aloe Tobey of Boston was awarded a degree of doctor of public health. Degrees of doctor of science were awarded to King Gould of Stillwater, Okla.; Victor Oliver Homerberg of Belmont; Gleason Willis Kendrick of Boston and John Wardsworth William Sullivan of Boston.

CALLS THINKING WITH IMPUNITY ROAD TO HELL

When a man is unable to find pleasure in a fairy story he is fit for the grave, members of the Boston University School of Religious Education and Social Service were told at their annual recognition day service today by the Rev. Dr. Henry W. Crane of Malden.

The minister warned against inward blasceness. He also warned the students against "thinking with impunity," and declared that "it is an extremely hard task for ministers to be good inwardly, but rather easy for them to be good externally because of conventions which surround them."

The members of the school and faculty marched from the main school building on Beacon street to the Church of the New Jerusalem on Bowdoin street, where the services were held.

"Those people who think with impunity are straight on the road to hell," Dr. Crane told the students. "It is a vitriolic falsehood to take into one's life the idea that you can say what you want if you feel that your life is governed by beautiful thoughts."

Dr. Crane declared that imagination is a vital part of the human man.

"When a man's imagination dies a major portion of him is dead," the minister declared. "Those who feel themselves so ghostly blase inwardly that they can't find beauty in fairy stories ought to die."

Dorothy M. Scott and Cyril H. Hix, juniors of the college, were awarded the $100 scholarships offered by the class of '25.

Jean Campbell and Merrill Stone, sophomores, were awarded similar scholarships awarded by the class of '26.

The graduating class voted a present of $1,000 to Dean Walter Scott Athearn for expenditures on the school library.

BUS OPERATOR ABBOTT'S JAIL SENTENCE REVOKED

A sentence of four months in Plymouth Jail imposed on David Abbott, Providence bus operator, by Judge James A. Lowell in Federal Court in December last, on a charge of contempt of court, was revoked in an opinion handed down today by the U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

Abbott was cited for contempt by the Eastern Massachusetts Railway Company on the allegation that he had violated an injunction of the Federal Court restraining him from operating buses in competition with the company between Taunton and Brockton.

Not only does the Circuit Court opinion quash the contempt conviction but it also recommends the dismissal of the bill for a restraining injunction "unless the bill is amended to confer jurisdiction" on the Federal Court below.

Knowlton to Resign

Concord, N. H., June 7 (A.P.).—Donald Knowlton, for the past five years assistant United States district attorney for New Hampshire, is to resign on June 30.

Three Brothers Meet for First Time in 35 Years

Westboro, June 7 (A.P.)—Three brothers met here for the first time in 35 years at a family gathering at home of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Fairbanks.

The brothers were Henry A., 81, of Waltham; George W., 81, of San Diego, Cal., and W. H. Fairbanks, 68. The brothers survive a family of 12.

The two older brothers are veterans of the Civil War.

NEW ROADWAY IN W. ROXBURY APPROVED

One of the major city improvements undertaken by the present administration came a step nearer completion today when Mayor Nichols approved the order providing for the widening and relocation of Ashland and Oakland streets, between Mattapan square and Washington street, West Roxbury.

Tomorrow the damage awards will be announced and within a few days Commissioner of Public Works Sullivan will ask for bids.

The widening of the streets will provide a main travel artery between Mattapan and West Roxbury and when completed the improvement will greatly relieve traffic congestion in half a dozen centers.

Damage awards of $97,569.22 have already been made, but the individuals have not yet been made public. Against these damages which the city must pay, betterment assessments of $25,341.61 have been assessed against property owners on Ashland street and $10,192.34 against the property owners on Oakland street.

There will be 100 parcels of property that will be cut in the widening of the streets, but a large majority of this is unimproved land and but few buildings will be damaged. Council has already granted $500,000 to complete the widening of the two thoroughfares.

BROOKLINE AUTOIST SUED FOR $42,000 AFTER CRASH

Springfield, June 7 (A.P.).—Dr. Arthur C. Pearce of Brookline is defendant in four actions for damages totaling $42,000 filed here today by Lawrence A. Wentworth and family as the result of an automobile accident on the Daniel Webster highway in Nashua, N. H., where Wentworth's car is alleged to have been struck by that of Dr. Pearce.

Four members of the Wentworth family are alleged to have suffered injuries.

Les Miserables — By Victor Hugo

JEAN VALJEAN and Cosette, escaping from the police, climbed a high wall and found themselves in a convent garden. Toward morning the gardener appeared and Jean Valjean recognized him as Fauchelevent, whose life he had once saved. The old man was grateful and agreed to help him.

HE took Jean Valjean to the nuns, told them he was his brother, and that he needed him as a helper in the convent garden. The Mother Superior agreed and said that she would care for Cosette. So the years passed. The two led a peaceful life, and Cosette grew up into a very pretty girl.

AFTER Fauchelevent died Jean Valjean took Cosette from the convent and established a home for her. Each day the white-haired old man and the young girl sat in a quiet part of the Luxembourg Gardens. A handsome young man often passed and looked at Cosette with interest. She noticed him, too.

MARIUS, the young man, fell in love with Cosette and followed her home. Jean Valjean saw how things were going; he loved Cosette as his own child, but he was desperately jealous and fearful that someone would take her from him. They hurriedly moved to another house. (Continued Tomorrow.)

South is the dealer. What is the proper bidding and play?

In the next issue Mr. Whitehead will explain the salient points in the bidding and play of the above hand. Fill out your own chart and compare it with his method.

These hands must not be bid or played "Double Dummy," i. e., as though all four hands were exposed.

Yesterday's Hand as Played by Mr. Whitehead

Salient Points of the Bidding

In response to the informatory double East makes the conventional bid of the extremely weak, four-card Spade suit in preference to the fairly strong five-card Diamond suit.

Salient Points of the Play

Trick 4. Declarer has lost one Heart and one Diamond and must lose one Club. In order to go game the rest of the tricks must be taken. This necessitates taking the double finesse in trumps and a lead toward the King of Clubs. While it is almost certain that a finesse can be taken in Hearts and a discard obtained, such procedure would not provide enough entries in Declarer's hand for the taking of the necessary trump finesses and the Club lead. Therefore the first finesse in trumps is taken at this trick.

Trick 9. The Heart rather than the Club is trumped, as the small trump in Dummy must be used on a Diamond. If Club is led first, the Heart Jack can be discarded on the return Diamond lead and a high Spade made by South as an over ruff when Heart is led.

Mr. Whitehead will answer questions concerning your Bridge problems. Write to him care of this paper, enclosing self-addressed stamped envelope.

MISS DIOGENES LEADS HER DOG

Esther Gardener, 19, of Exeter street, Back Bay, fashionably attired and with a dog on a leash, was in Brighton district court today on an unusual automobile charge.

She was accused of driving through the Essex-Cambridge section of Brighton on the night of May 19, flashing a spotlight on parked machines and on couples loitering along the boulevard. She finally flashed the light on Patrolman O'Neill, who stopped the machine and took her license and registration numbers and later summoned her.

Court officers told the young woman when she appeared in court with the dog today that the animal would have to be parked outside.

"Oh, hell! he so lonesome without me he won't know what to do," she protested.

The charge was filed.

NEW MYSTERY THRILLER AT THE COPLEY

By NICHOLAS YOUNG

A CHANGE in program, but no change in spirit or tone, took possession of Mr. Clive's Copley last night. From "The Ghost Train" to "The Solitaire Man," in general as poet, was just another week-end jump from scream to scream — from crook to crook. When an audience is properly attuned to shocks and thrills there is no excuse for mere actors to play mean tricks on their art or tremble in the hazards of their employment. And if audience reaction to the mystery and crime discovered in "The Solitaire Man" may be taken as a guide by the bewildered critic Mr. Clive has guessed right again.

May Edlss

This newest venture in theatrical mystery and muddled easily fixes Bella Cohen and Samuel Spewack, the authors, as mistress and master of perplexing attention. It was, indeed, a real achievement to contrive a play of sufficient novelty to hold interest for three acts while the characters remained more or less huddled in the cramped quarters of an airplane cabin. There was no great display of crime, but great splashes of mystery kept the loyal apostles of the Copley in spreading goosefish and giggles.

There was really excellent acting in the unfolding of the tale, the burden of which fell on the shoulders of Norman Cannon and David Clyde. To the surprise of every one's throat out to be sinners, though there was manifest relief when Cannon finally evaded the clutches of the law. May Edlss divided her evening between hysterical chatter and that new and fashionable ailment, air sickness. Serviceable bits also were contributed by Edmund George, Gaby Fay and Elspeth Dudgeon.

Unlike most mystery and crime plays, "The Solitaire Man" was inhabited by practically no virtuous people. They were not to be folk, however, strangely assorted, but in some respects resolutely human. The single setting, an airplane cabin, was a striking piece of stage architecture.

Norumbega Program

Cliff Curran, "King of the Air" and his death-defying stunts at the top of a 96-foot pole, started his last week at Norumbega Park yesterday. The theatre offering consisted of four vaudeville acts, a feature photoplay, a newsreel and a comedy film.

Continuing Shows

ST. JAMES—"Rain," a stirring drama of the tropics in which a maid and a minister are at odds.

COLONIAL—Fred Stone in "Criss Cross." The last week of this annual jollification by the Stone family.

WILBUR—"Listen Dearie," a musical play. Built for Summer entertainment and seems to be making good.

GAYETY—Tommy "Bozo" Snyder in His Own Show. The silent Mr. Snyder is now on his final week at this playhouse.

MODERN AND BEACON—John Barrymore in "Don Juan" (film) with Vitaphone accompaniment and concert. The last week.

PHIL SPITALNY AT STATE

By LEO GAFFNEY.

Philip Spitalny, Marcus Loew's most popular bandsman, has returned to the State where he now shares the bright spot on the program with Ramon Novarro and Alice Terry. Mr. Spitalny plays his same music. And the Novarro-Terry combination furnished the parties of the first and second part, respectively, in a film adaptation of the Viceroy Sparr play, "The World and His Wife." Possibly for the benefit of the electric sign displays this cinema version glowingly announces itself as, simply, "Lovers." The title writer, it seems, was considerate of your suspicions.

In spite of a wordiness in captions, a certain attempt to impart a moral lesson, and a ten-cent answer for a fadeout, "Lovers" puts a strong claim on the attention. The personable Mr. Novarro may be mainly responsible for it. Or, perhaps it is the adroit manner of Director Hahn in presenting the story. Whatever the reason, the film has moments of beauty and power. The locale is modern Spain, and the characters are interesting, well-to-do folk who have enough spare time to be interested in each other. Scandalous tongues wag, a lady's name is linked with a certain young gentleman, and a duel or two must satisfy for the family honor.

John Miljan, Edward Martindel and George K. Arthur are to be found in the supporting cast, but Novarro carries his film alone.

The jovial Mr. Spitalny plays jazz seriously. He retains a few "gumdrops" on his program, but he can take Liszt's Second Hungarian Rhapsody, heap it up with surprising dynamic effects, read it rhythmically, but never allow it to suggest the sing-song style of the dance orchestra.

Short films and an organ solo add to the bill.

'Cherry Blossoms' Coming

It has suddenly been determined to close the management of "Listen Dearie" at the Wilbur Theatre so that this attraction may be taken to Chicago to open a summer engagement there next Monday. To replace this attraction in Boston the Messrs. Shubert will send to the Wilbur next Monday their latest musical play, "Cherry Blossoms," a musical play from the "The Willow Tree," with Howard Marsh and its notable New York cast.

BAXTER SIGNED TO FILM 'THE COWARD'

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS

LOS ANGELES, June 7.—"Please say," Warner Baxter requested when I saw him at luncheon with his attractive young wife and Alice Joyce, who has lately joined the Hollywood colony, that "The Coward' I am to make for F. B. O. is by Arthur Stringer."

Mr. Baxter's emphasis was caused by everyone believing that he was to play the role that Charles Ray created with such success a few years ago. Being modest by nature, Warner was afraid everyone would think he was staging a return to childhood. Charlie was in his last scene when he played in this picture, which Thomas Ince directed.

Telling this story backwards makes it necessary for me to add a postscript. Warner, who has had many offers since he decided to strike out for himself as a free lance actor after refusing to specialize as a western hero for Famous Players-Lasky signed a contract with William Le Baron and Edwin King to play "The Coward." It is an original story by Stringer and appeared some months ago in Hearst's International Magazine.

This is Mr. Baxter's first free lance job in the movies. He has heretofore been under contract to one company or another. Sharon Lynn, a pretty girl who has been playing short reel pictures, will play opposite him, and Alfred Rabock will direct him.

THE DeMille studios are all agog.

They are expecting a distinguished visitor, a little girl by the name of Phyllis Gibbs, who happened to win the beauty contest waged by the DeMille company in Australia.

Phyllis gets more than a free trip to Hollywood. She gets a job, and Phil Gersdorf has already been sent to San Francisco to meet the stranger, who is due to arrive in this country the latter part of the week.

IT is not often that David Griffith has taken the title of Old Doc "Yank." He usually directs his own, but how could he refuse to take a few added scenes in "Topsy and Eva" when Rosetta and Vivian Duncan, in their pertinet manner, banged him to lend a hand? Neither the Duncans nor Joseph Schenck are willing to release "Topsy and Eva" until it is letter perfect. I understand it went over big at a preview out of town the other night. Still the sisters want to be sure there are no loose ends when it makes its debut in Hollywood before all the critical film stars.

Hence the world premiere has been postponed until the sixteenth of June, which will give Mr. Griffith plenty of time to finish his scenes.

DANCE ARTISTS AT ORPHEUM

Roscoe Alls and alkie Pullman scored heavily with the audience yesterday at Loew's Orpheum. There, where they are topping an exceptionally good vaudeville program this week. Roscoe is hailed as Broadway's smartest dancing comedian and Katie as its champion Black Bottom dancer. They work two acts, one for a team, and again as featured entertainers in an elaborate music and dance act, which includes their own syncopated jazz band and Dorothy Ellsworth and Nell Graham.

Charles and Grace Keating present an amusing comedy skit called "Their First Love," and Nick Lucas includes Greene and Parker in "At the Depot"; Lillian Bernard and Al Henrie, "Queens of Syncopation"; and Gordon and Day in "Mirthful Nonsense."

On the screen is shown "Resurrection," the film version of Count Leo Tolstoy's drama of love and sacrifice, with Rod La Rocque and Dolores del Rio in the leading parts. The familiar Prince Dmitri is given a truly life-like portrayal by La Rocque, and the character of Katusha Maslova, the unfortunate lover, is played in a touching manner by Dolores del Rio.

PLENTY OF LAUGHTER ON KEITH BILL THIS WEEK

A laugh for everyone sizes up the Keith bill for the current showing. Headed by Jack Norworth the program is filled with comedy and the well filled house responded to the efforts, thespian and otherwise of every number.

The Carrie & Eddy Revue, h'is the imagination and fills its space on the program with much to spare. A good act and well received, to judes from the audience's response. There there was Jack Redmond, and Alice Lawlor, both aces, both good numbers on any star bill.

Thomas J. Ryan & Co., came in for a cordial reception with an act of many excellent features. Mignon, the name alone is good for a curtain raiser, and the act was even better than the name sounds. The St. Onge Trio entertained in their own inimitable manner and Harriet Naurot was there with everything. Bernard and Wallace should share the headline honors. The act was one of the best and was received the big hand which greeted and begged for more.

Hamid Bey Coming

The man who was recently buried alive with all oxygen completely cut off for a period of three hours is coming to Loew's Orpheum next week in the person of Hamid Bey, a youthful Egyptian "miracle man."

His daring and amazing feats include self-imposed catalepsy, rendering his body lifeless and immune to pain, and a burial alive on the stage.

TODAY

IT'S A LITTLE late for government officials to realize that men actually do fly, and that so far as defence goes the ocean of water no longer exists.

Battleships and coast defence guns are a joke. What could the German navy have done against Chamberlin, flying toward Berlin, 20,000 feet up? Nobody knew he was near until he flew down and made himself known.

PRESIDENT COOLIDGE will devote earnest attention to this plain fact:

A HOSTILE EUROPEAN NATION COULD SEND A THOUSAND OR TWO THOUSAND BOMB-DROPPING AIR MACHINES WESTWARD ACROSS THE ATLANTIC TODAY AND WITHIN FORTY-EIGHT HOURS NEW YORK, BOSTON AND WASHINGTON WOULD BE WIPED OUT.

GOLF, according to accident insurance companies, comes third among "dangerous sports." Victims of 451 golf accidents collected insurance last year. Naive for "cuts with sharp instruments." The instruments were bottles, on the "19th hole." However, for one man injured at golf, one hundred die for lack of exercise, so play golf.

CHAMBERLIN and Levine ended the longest non-stop flight on record, in Saxony, Prussia, in the town of Eisleben, where Martin Luther was born and died.

What would Luther have thought could he have seen that bird from the air land in his town?

MRS. ADA SAWYER GARRETT, aged seventy-four, is taken to a hospital, half starved. She had been economizing on food "to avoid poverty in my old age." lived on 37 cents a day, and owns $6,000,000 worth of property, including $1,800,000 cash, as shown in court. She is declared incompetent.

IF SHE had been an old man, starving his brain and his spirit instead of starving his stomach, in pursuit of more wealth, she would have been "quite normal," and nobody would have interfered.

GENERAL MOTORS is invited to build airplanes and compete with Henry Ford in that field, also. Mr. Sloan and Mr. Dupont may say that airplanes are "commercial" and they can't put their stockholders' money in non-commercial enterprises.

Flying, however, would be commercial if they went into it with Ford, who has no stockholders to consult. The first American Individual or corporation to build a giant all metal trans-Atlantic airplane carrying one hundred passengers, regardless of weather will render great service to this nation.

GEORGE B. UNDERHILL and his wife had been married forty-one years when a doctor told the husband that his wife, stricken with paralysis, could never be well again and could not live long. Husband and wife agreed not to be separated. He killed her and himself, arranging burial in one grave and leaving $50,000. They had no children. The ancients would say that was doing what they had a right to do. Our generation calls it sin.

THE WALL STREET bears' joyous hour ended with the opening of the Stock Exchange yesterday. Bulls tossed bears in the air, setting new high price records.

It was almost enough to make the most pessimistic bear turn dull.

SPEED AT THE PLAY IT HAPPENS

MRS. HURD IN SECOND PLACE

Former Providence Girl Plays a Pair of 40's in Second Round at Belmont

By BILL GRIMES

Miss Glenna Collett, of Westchester-Fairfield, former national and three times eastern champion, put together a pair of 40s and picked up 6 strokes on the field during the second round of the W. E. G. A. match at Belmont Spring Country Club today.

Although Mrs. Hurd was two seven strokes behind Miss Collett after the first round, she managed to keep the runner up to Miss Collett, Mrs. G. Henry Stetson, defending champion, in the distance and was only one behind the former President's daughter.

Miss Collett got away to a wonderful start with seven fives going to the sixth on which hole she had three putts and came up with a 6. She was given 4½ at the 12th. There was nothing freakish about her inward round. Were it not a bit unsteady on the seventh she would have been in the 30s instead of taking eighty for the round.

MRS. HURD NERVOUS.

Mrs. Hurd, who was within one stroke of Miss Collett at the end of the first round, appeared to be quite nervous from the start. In fact, a photographer from the first tee upset her so much that she requested him to stop taking pictures.

Then she hooked her drive into the rough and to get back on the second and wound up with a six which dropped her two more strokes behind Glenna, who was home in two and got a par four.

Miss Collett was short on her approach going to the second hole, although her putt dipped the back of the cup she could only get a five.

This dropped her back a stroke when Mrs. Hurd sank a five putter a four.

After they had halved the third with threes Miss Collett hit two beautiful wood shots on the long fourth to be on the green, looked her over into the rough, and after taking two to get out and home she forward with three putts which totalled seven strokes for the hole.

Glenna kissed up with a 12 foot putt of the cup and dropped the ball for a 5-hole four. The fifth was halved with fours.

After having one fine wood shot on the fifth, Mrs. Hurd pushed her second off the green. Gerald was on with her third as was Mrs. Hurd but the former took three to get down for a 6, while Mrs. Hurd went down in two for a five.

Going to the seventh, the former Providence girl missed the upper side of the green with her second and was at the foot of the hill. However her third was well going past the hole to the top of the green.

But fortunately for her, the ball hit a rock and rebounded back to a flat spot to the right of the green. She was not at all perturbed and took a seven. Mrs. Hurd, who had played a poor shot from a distance to the Miss Collett, faced her putt to take a five.

GLENNA PICKS UP A STROKE.

Glenna took a wood shot for the eighth. She was on the green in two and had the hole's only three. Mrs. Hurd's second was short and she took a five.

Glenna took a wood shot for the ninth and was on the green in two. Mrs. Hurd's drive was short and she had to play her second over the trees. She made a poor shot and Miss Collett was down in two for a four. Mrs. Hurd's third was short and she took a five.

Miss Collett's drive to the 10th was short and she had to play her second over the trees. She made a poor shot and Miss Collett was down in two for a four. Mrs. Hurd's third was short and she took a five.

Miss Collett's drive to the 11th was short and she had to play her second over the trees. She made a poor shot and Miss Collett was down in two for a four. Mrs. Hurd's third was short and she took a five.

Miss Collett's drive to the 12th was short and she had to play her second over the trees. She made a poor shot and Miss Collett was down in two for a four. Mrs. Hurd's third was short and she took a five.

Miss Collett's drive to the 13th was short and she had to play her second over the trees. She made a poor shot and Miss Collett was down in two for a four. Mrs. Hurd's third was short and she took a five.

Miss Collett's drive to the 14th was short and she had to play her second over the trees. She made a poor shot and Miss Collett was down in two for a four. Mrs. Hurd's third was short and she took a five.

Miss Collett's drive to the 15th was short and she had to play her second over the trees. She made a poor shot and Miss Collett was down in two for a four. Mrs. Hurd's third was short and she took a five.

Miss Collett's drive to the 16th was short and she had to play her second over the trees. She made a poor shot and Miss Collett was down in two for a four. Mrs. Hurd's third was short and she took a five.

Miss Collett's drive to the 17th was short and she had to play her second over the trees. She made a poor shot and Miss Collett was down in two for a four. Mrs. Hurd's third was short and she took a five.

Miss Collett's drive to the 18th was short and she had to play her second over the trees. She made a poor shot and Miss Collett was down in two for a four. Mrs. Hurd's third was short and she took a five.

Youngsters Riding Country Club Races Horse Coming Back | Millionaire Sport Golfers Give Course That Settles It

—By Nick Flatley—

HORSE RACING IS SPORT OF MONEY KINGS

HORSE RACING is the sport of kings, money kings. The graceful speed of the thoroughbred furnishes one of the greatest of all sport thrills, but it takes a millionaire to stand the strain of owning and racing horses

The Country Club race meeting, which was resumed last June after a ten-year vacation, cost $53,000 for a three-day show. That was merely the expense of putting it on. The receipts were some $15,000 less than that, but to horsemen that's small change.

Next week's meeting will be one of the biggest of its kind ever attempted in this country. Record fields have been entered in all events through the three days' program, and indications are that there will be no defect this year. Interest in the blooded horse in this country is growing amazingly.

Tracks are springing up wherever the law will permit. Riding schools are getting almost as frequent as garages. The kids of this generation are turning to riding for their fun, just as the youngsters of the last generation went for the automobile.

Nick Flatley

John R. Macomber, who is one of the world's best-known horse owners and breeders, says that collecting money to insure The Country Club race meeting is one of the easiest jobs there is. J. R. was appointed a committee of one to solicit pledges in case receipts went too far behind expenditures.

Everybody approached, he admits, was glad to be put down for at least $1,000. J. R. has had much experience collecting for charities and other things like that. He knows the moneyed people. And he admits that many men with cash, who would hesitate and argue about donating for real charity or investing for certain profits, are more than glad to get in on a big race meeting.

THE BOOKIES HAVE MOST OF THE HORSE CENTS.

Steeplechasing is the most dangerous of sports, yet there ain't always more riders rushing for the chance to break their necks than there are jockeys for ordinary races.

EVEN THE GOLFERS VOTE FOR HORSE RACES

THE Country Club race meet used to be one of society's annual great events in the past. And when revived a year ago, it came back bigger than ever. It was so successful that sportsmen in other cities have taken up the idea quite generally, and horse clubs everywhere have increased in membership.

Next week's races have drawn entries from the biggest stables in the country, and the best jumpers in the world will be cutting up the carefully nurtured fairways of the Country Club.

There is no fanatic more violent than the golfer. His course is sacred above all else. Each blade of grass is precious. The Brookline course is one of the universe's best. It is meticulously kept that way. The members are more than proud of it; it's sort of religion with them.

Yet when the matter of running horse races was put to a vote, the thoroughbreds carried the election by better than a 10 to 1 margin. That was the ultimate test of the horse's popularity.

Bench Rigney for College Player

Washington, June 7 (A P.)—Shortstop "Topper" Rigney recently obtained by the Washington Americans from the Boston Red Sox, has been benched and Manager Harley Harris announced Bob Reese, former George Tech captain, was to be given a tryout at the position in today's game with Cleveland.

Rigney, who was obtained in exchange for Buddy Myer, Manager Harris said has fallen down recently in his fielding. Since May 15 he has made 10 errors, almost an average of one misplay a game and his batting average has been .212.

Braddock, of Jersey City, and Ernie Schaaf, of Hoboken, the ex-Navy champ, and Dan Conrad, of Newark, and Harold Mays, of Bayonne—although I believe Mays has gone into the heavyweight division and Schaaf is also about there.

Light Heavies Numerous in N. J.

But it is around Cavalier Braddock and Schaaf that the argument centers revolves at this time. There is the matter of the light heavyweight championship of New Jersey, a title more important than you might suppose.

Mr. Valentino favors me with clippings showing that his man Cavalier got a newspaper decision over James J. Braddock, of Jersey City, in an open air show at Arcola Park not long ago, and he now challenges Mr. Phil Schlossberg's protege, Ernie Schaaf.

Both Braddock and Schaaf were in the ring here Saturday night against opponents, and Murray Gillis, of New Haven, whose fumbling proved a little mysterious to the ex-sailor. Braddock met the more spectacular board fiend George La Rocco.

Muldoon Shouts Praise of Braddock

Mr. William Muldoon, the old Roman of the New York Boxing Commission, liked Braddock very much. He predicted great things for him, a prediction in which I freely join, despite the defeat by Cavalier. I judge that a beating from Cavalier does not make any man a bad fighter. I note that he weighed 176 to Braddock's 162 at Arcola Park.

Cavalier must be a very good boxer. He holds a decision over George La Rocco and has beaten Jim Sigmund, Paul Mercurio three times, Lloyd Skinner, Tom Roper, Joe Hudson, Billy Vidabeck and Schaaf.

If inconsequents could make a man champion, Cavalier would be a titleholder in no time, as astute authorities as Mr. James J. Corbett has placed what you might call the stamp of approval on the young man Mr. Corbett says Cavalier is doing about a year ago, and was so impressed that he took Cavalier in hand and showed him a few tricks.

The Love Slave — A Guardian — By Homer Banks

Copyright, 1927, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

HER NEW GUARDIAN— [illegible]

A FRIEND IN NEED—Corinne's first thought was to whom she could turn for advice. Hastily she ran over in her mind the men she knew. She felt that this was a situation that could only be met by a male friend. There was "Flash." She would call him. "Flash" was flattered by her attention, and met her promptly after the late rehearsal of the show that evening. One glance at her face indicated that Corinne was gravely troubled. "What is it?" he asked, anxiously, as they walked along Broadway. Corinne's eyes were clouded.

CORINNE'S DILEMMA—"Let's not talk now," Corinne pleaded. "Can't we go some place?" "Flash" guided her to a taxi and ordered the chauffeur to drive to "Papa" Henderson's. Corinne related swiftly the circumstances of her mother's sudden death and the appointment of young Clifford Chandler as her guardian. "I am afraid," she said doubtfully, "that he won't approve of my new life." "I'll take care of him," said "Flash." "These smart, book-learning youngsters, who've been educated abroad don't figure here. You must realize, my dear, Broadway is a closed corporation—once you're a member of it, you automatically are protected. But the trouble is—getting in. A lot of wise ones have failed in that. A smart attorney won't have any difficulty in sending your boy friend back to merry old London," Corinne nodded. "It's not that," she said. "There's something else. I—I'm afraid." (Continued Tomorrow.)

Water Supply Obtained from the "Old Oaken Bucket"

By Chas. A. L. Reed, M. D.
Former President of the American Medical Association.

THE water that the old oaken bucket brings dripping from the well is [illegible] refreshing, may or may not be good water. Many a well of the good drinking water [illegible] the means of establishing [illegible] epidemics of typhoid [illegible] and many diseases in animals.

While the chief source of contamination [illegible] supplies, are classified [illegible] streams as deep wells and [illegible] springs, [illegible] wells have adopted [illegible] figure of 1.0 feet as [illegible] depth at which a well [illegible] A well of adequate depth is fairly shallow. There is a general opinion that a deep well is always safe. But this is not entirely true, for [illegible] contamination of a well deep [illegible] has been overlooked.

The geologist probably would say that a deep well was one that took its water from a water-bearing formation that was separated by an impervious layer from the water percolating downward from the surface, but not all deep wells conform to this definition.

Deep wells, however, especially drive-n wells, usually have the advantage of being lined with metal casings or stones which are relatively tight at the surface of the ground.

Shallow wells are often lined with rough rocks, poor brickwork, wooden tubs, or [illegible] set with little cement. Statistics show that of shallow wells only 18 per cent. are satisfactory, and of springs 2% per cent. but that deep wells give a figure of 85 per cent. from which the water supply is pure.

It is unfortunate [illegible] rather common to find the top of the metal casing of a deep well cut off even to the bottom of a pump pit, and there is opening between the pump pipe and the ground is not closed. Any water which accumulates in the pump pit may run down through this unprotected space. At least one typical epidemic in a small town was caused by sewage water entering a 300-foot well in this way. It is usually better to carry the casing of a well above the level of the ground, and then make sure that the deep pipe from the pump makes a water-tight joint with the casing. Some [illegible] deep well water gets [illegible] in the [illegible] casing and [illegible] pump. [illegible] enter. Some wells may penetrate solution passages or cavities in limestone and these passages may be found to [illegible] hours or a day after polluted matter [illegible] enters. This is not so common, however, as contamination through the open upper end of the casing.

Deep wells are filled by water veins that are far underground. When one of these veins [illegible] to reach the surface, [illegible] water by more or less [illegible] flow, it is a spring. On many farms these springs are provided with shallow wells that act as catch basins for the outflow. The [illegible] basins, unless properly constructed, are liable to be contaminated by surface water. But springs may be polluted far from the point of their emergence.

You can understand this when you remember that most springs are formed by water percolating downward through loose earth, or mantle rock, until it strikes a bed of impervious material along which it is forced to run to the point of emergence. If the surface water is fairly pure before it starts to percolate, and if it is amply filtered by its passage through the earth it should be safe to use at the point of appearance. Most contamination of spring water, however, takes place after it emerges from the earth.

Nevertheless, its safety may sometimes be improved by cleaning up the uplands back of the spring and seeing that privies and other sources of dangerous wastes are removed to a lower level. The spring basin must, of course, be protected against surface water and contamination by stock or other animals.

About the best precaution is to ensure the source of any drinking supply on a level higher than any possible source of contamination by drainage.

Forbidden Lips

by ROBERT TERRY SHANNON
AUTHOR OF "THE TAXI DANCER"

A Startling Serial Story of Love, Terror and the Night Clubs

Chapter 54.

For a moment May Desmond's feet hesitated on the stairs, and then swiftly she came on up and into the room where Tom and Jacqueline waited in tense silence. The girls themselves were white and startled.

"Who is it?" Tom demanded.

So intense was May's nervousness that a moment passed before she was able to speak. While they waited the knocking on the door was repeated.

"I heard his cane as he came up on the porch . . . it's the Spook."

Jacqueline's eyes widened with a new, fresh start of alarm, an apprehension which was reflected in the strained apprehension on May's face.

Tom looked swiftly from one girl to the other, his face hardening, scowling.

"All right—I'll go down and let him in," he said with a touch of grimness. "You two wait here and keep out of it, whatever happens——"

He moved toward the door, but May Desmond was in front of him quickly, her arms outspread to restrain him. From the bed Jacqueline was protesting hurriedly.

"No! No!" Her voice was tremulous with a throbbing rush of devotion. "They might hurt you! They might kill you!"

"You don't know the Spook. He's as bad as Lupino . . . worse!" May Desmond added. "Stay here . . . keep out of sight!"

Before Tom Ware could detain her the little dancer from the Sea Shell was out of the room and halfway down the stairs. Her voice rose—she called, with carrying power, to the person outside the door.

"Just a minute—I'll be right down."

Before Tom could follow her she had turned and was remounting the stairs with the same elastic speed of motion.

"I don't want him to know you're here—I don't want any of Lupino's outfit to catch on," she breathed hastily. "Don't you see they'll think I double-crossed them and tipped you off—"

"But my car is outside," Tom protested. "The game's up, May. It's too late to stall any more. We've got to settle it once and for all tonight."

Jacqueline was now out of bed, heedless of her nudity, and acting. She rushed to Tom and threw her round warm arms around him. "You can't go—I won't let you, she almost sobbed. "If you open that door it might mean death for you. Don't you understand, dear? I couldn't stand it if anything happened to you. Tom—I've got to keep you out of this. They'd shoot you down like a dog!"

Her emotion vibrated through her body with a mighty force; her clinging warmth enmeshed him with a thousand quivering tendrils of love, but calmly, with a force that disregarded her tenderness, he loosened her arms and thrust her back toward the bed.

"I'll have to face it some time, and it's better to get it over with one way or another. Don't worry, Jacqueline—I can handle it."

He was out of the room, going down the stairs with May Desmond beside him trying to reach the door first. Jacqueline stole after them out into the hall—peered down over the balustrade, a trembling future of ivory flesh and revealing silks; of wide staring eyes.

It was May Desmond's hands that opened the door—her slender body was interposed between Tom's and the person outside. For a breathless moment Jacqueline watched. The next beat of her heart hung in suspense . . . there might be shooting . . . looking down she could see it in Tom's right arm was bent, that a revolver was in his hand. But the weapon was behind May Desmond's back, and invisible to anyone outside.

Silence.

Those at the open door stood tense and alert, waiting the first word, the first move, the first sound to come from the other side.

It was the voice of the Spook that broke the silence.

"Well, Mr. Ware—" the words were high-pitched, cracked.

Tom's voice, steady but charged with watchful terseness.

"What do you want here? Speak quick."

"Don't start anything!" May's words had a hysterical ring. "For God's sake don't pull any stuff——"

She moved forward, her hands falling on the Spook's right arm—he walked with his cane in his left hand—as though to restrain him from pulling a weapon.

"It's all right, May," the Spook told her. "I'm alone and I'm not looking for trouble—not with this gentleman, at least."

He saw that Tom Ware was covering him with an automatic and his astonishment at the girl's action was plainly evident.

"Don't beat around the bush," Tom Ware commanded succinctly. "Come clean. What do you want?"

"If you'd put away that gat——" the Spook responded. "I think I might be able to answer your questions with a whole lot less nervousness, Mr. Ware. As a matter of fact I take it as down-right impoliteness on your part to point that thing at me when I've shown I've traded on the square with the cards on the table."

"You're one of Lupino's gang," Tom Ware returned, "and that's enough for me."

"It may be too much for you," the Spook answered. "Yes sir, it may be too much for you, Mr. Ware, unless you watch your step."

The Modern Madonna in a Changing World

DRAWN BY Nell Brinkley

"There is a sight all hearts beguiling—
A youthful mother to her baby smiling . . ."

DID you think the "Madonna picture" was old-fashioned—too old fashioned for display? Did you fear that the hectic parade of modernes that goes by in an unbroken stream of "flivvers" and limousines, the parade of "flapper" girls, [illegible] that marches across the white paper of all our "reading matter," would have no room for a picture of a little mother with a downy-headed baby in her arms?

Well, it isn't so. Even though a painting of a Madonna is no longer carried through the streets by the nobles while the whole town turns out to see and admire, even though the drawing of a mother with her baby is no longer the rich frontispiece of a periodical, even though the kindly day of the "old pictures" seems gone [illegible] has, silk elbow gloves and ruffled [illegible], the MOTHER HERSELF AND HER BABY ARE NOT GONE. Well Rather NO!

The world moves. Pictures and the manners, their moods, their material changes. But [illegible] mothers, enwrapped in their babies, [illegible] the restless [illegible] the clubs, of the life world of horse [illegible] all sports, of a greedy [illegible] [illegible] mood of ANY [illegible] and parents are some of gold and poverty-stricken in loyalty, are going about their infatuated business of being good little mothers. They are still, believe me, on top of the changing world.

And they will always be. And there will always be a man to think a young mother the earthly wonder of the world and the only kind of a girl woo is worth being married to.

So here is a picture of a little modern Madonna, persisting in a [illegible] way. Would you like to come for a drive with me?"

She was standing before the mirror putting on her hat. She said, back to: "Yes—if you can drive 90 in [illegible]."

"Will sixty do? Or seventy?"

She went with him. She wanted escape. She thought, "If I could get away from it for an hour—even for an hour I'd have the nerve to pull myself together." [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

FREE TICKETS FOR CIRCUS

"Jeanie," the baby elephant of the 101 Ranch Wild West herd, dreamed that she and five other animals (all of different species) became "scrambled." For instance, she had her own head and forelegs, another animal's body and a third animal's hind legs. Six outline pictures will be printed of six such "scrambled" animals. Children pasting the parts of the six pictures properly together; that is, as the animals appear in real life, will be given tickets to the 101 Ranch show.

Did all you boys and girls get the "Scrambled Animals" right? If you did, you can get tickets to the 101 Ranch Wild West show by bringing the six pictures to the Boston American office, 4-6 Winter street, any day this week between the hours of 9 A. M. and 4:30 P. M. Tickets will be mailed to you by the Boston American.

DAILY SHORT STORY

THE LOVE LIE

By Louis Arthur Cunningham

THERE was one uneasy and unhappy heart aboard the Gloucester schooner, Thomas Agnew; Bart Murray dreaded the hour when they would make port. All the way from the Banks he had feared that hour and now that the rugged New England coast lay like a gray pall on the horizon he prayed as one of old that his chalice might pass from him. For Bart Murray was a poor prevaricator and he had a tremendous lie to tell.

The lie must be told to Alice Carsden about Jerry Raine. Even now, Bart knew, Alice would be about to open and decipher her bridal-gear for she was betrothed to Jerry and they were to wed upon his return from this trip. But they would not wed, for the Thomas Agnew was returning minus Jerry Raine.

And the manner of his going. One night at Miquelon when the ship put in for repairs Jerry went ashore with some others. Bart among them. All returned to their vessel except Jerry Raine. He was not to be found. They waited for him without result. The following night a battered body was discovered and identified as Raine's. Apparently the victim had met with foul play.

This was in the days when news did not travel so fast as it does now, and those aboard the fishing schooner knew they would be the first to carry the sad tidings to Gloucester town, and the girl who waited for her sweetheart's return from sea.

To Bart Murray would fall the task of telling her. Bart had been Jerry's best friend, despite the fact that he had been Jerry's surest rival for the heart and hand of Alice. Bart was big and rugged and slow; not too handsome, but kind and honest of countenance and in his quaint ways lovable as a child. But Jerry . . . so, he had been one to win and hold a maiden's heart; he with his dark, curly hair and his flashing black eyes, his tronzed, clear skin and gleaming teeth. small wonder that Jerry had triumphed.

Now Bart had his sad duty to perform . . . perhaps Alice would be waiting at the dock. He must tell her that Jerry, her lover, her intended husband, was dead. He must tell her that lie!

Of all the crew, perhaps, Bart alone knew that Jerry Raine still lived when they set sail homeward. Bart believed Raine deserved death for his shocking conduct, but he determined to hold the truth forever secret.

Bart had seen Jerry meet a woman that night in Miquelon, La Rose Blanche they called her. And Jerry like many men before him, good and bad, had flung honor, lasting happiness and peace of mind recklessly away for the sake of lips red as sin, for eyes treacherously seductive. Jerry had taken the woman with him on a liner bound for France. Bart could not stay him. What use to plead with a man maddened to frenzy by his desire for an alluring woman?

"I'm going, Bart!" he had said. "You can tell Alice what you please. You should worry; you can marry her yourself now. You're a darn sight more worthy of her than I am, at that. I'll never come back Gloucester way again, so don't worry. Tell her I'm dead; make her forget me."

Bart was left dumfounded, his slow wits unable to grasp precisely what had happened. Then, the following day, they found the battered body of that unfortunate, floating down stream. They called it Jerry Raine and Bart held his peace.

But now the time of the ordeal was near at hand. He would have to look into Alice Carsden's eyes, blue, trustful eyes that had always confused him, and lie like the Prince of Liars. Bart dreaded the ordeal. He could imagine the grief of this girl, who even long before Agnew's last departure, had been embroidering little pieces of linen for her home, preparing her bridal dress, hoping, dreaming, anticipating.

The Thomas Agnew felt her way up the harbor, through the schooners anchored in stream, and finally edged in towards her berth. There were many waiting on the pier to greet the returning fishermen; Bart scanned faces in vain for a sight of Alice. She was nowhere to be seen.

That, however, did not postpone the hour of the trial for long. Once ashore Bart determined to break the news. The weight of his secret, the knowledge that he must lie to the girl he loved so well weighed heavily upon his heart. Must he go on living with ever-present consciousness that he had deceived her and left her believing in a man so unworthy?

Alice greeted her visitor in the quiet sitting-room of her father's home. Her face, he thought, was pale, wistful; he wondered what she might know. But she seemed to suspect nothing, so boldly avoiding her eyes, Bart began.

"Jerry . . . Jerry won't be back, Alice," he said. "He—he was killed in Miquelon—but he died fighting like a man—"

The narrator stopped suddenly and glanced at the girl. She was not weeping; she seemed not even astonished. Her eyes remained sad, but her mouth quirked into a tw st. ed smile.

"Bart, you dear, clumsy, old goose," she said gently. "Jerry wrote me a letter that got here a week ago. He confessed everything. And I—I was glad that my eyes were opened at last. There are better men. But he said you know all about it. Why did you lie to me?"

But Bart, emboldened by his powers of mendacity, was sure now he could do anything. He put his huge arm about Alice and tilted her chin with his hand until he could kiss her lips. His lie, he concluded, had been a tremendous success.

MEDBURY SAYS---

By JOHN P. MEDBURY

NOW that the touring season is in, thousands of farmers are opening up dog kennels along the highways.

IN another week or so motorists will be able to get indigestion in any part of the country.

MOST cows now average three frankfurters to the mile.

ONE cross-country driver has the right idea. He hooked his machine up to a drug store and filled the trunk with bicarbonate of soda.

HE emptied the tool box and loaded it with dyspepsia tablets.

HIS wife was very picky. She liked hot dogs, but she called them "Torrid Torsoes."

SHE wouldn't eat a frankfurter unless it was pedigreed.

IT had to be registered with the American Kennel Club.

HER husband was just the opposite. He'd eat anything. He put his finger between two pieces of bread the other day and didn't know the difference.

HE ate both his thumbs before he discovered his mistake.

ONE man ate so many hot dogs last week that he had to be operated on by a veterinary surgeon.

THE prison was forced to put a muzzle on him to keep him from biting the doctor.

HE was so vicious that they had to send for the pound man to take him home.

SEVERAL stands now handle hot dogs made out of animal cracker dough. They sell them to vegetarians.

THEY also put fins on their frankfurters so that people will buy them on Friday.

THE weenie business is getting larger all the time. Motorists who go out driving on Sunday now hope for the best and look for the worst.

THE MEDITATIONS OF A WIFE

By HELEN ROWLAND

A MAN falls in love painfully, slowly, almost inch by inch—but he falls OUT of love with a swift and sudden jolt.

* * *

A woman falls in love as easily as she would sink into a beautiful dream, but falls out of love only after a long and desperate struggle to hang onto her illusions, and keep her eyes shut.

* * *

Falling out of love is as painful as coming out from under the anaesthetic after an operation. It is like hearing the alarm clock in the middle of a pleasant dream. Or like coming to the end of a fascinating novel, and closing the book.

* * *

It would not be so unbearable if every love-affair could be broken off with a violent quarrel. But most of them are not "broken off"; they just sag in the middle and come apart from their own weight.

* * *

A woman could relinquish a love affair far more cheerfully and effectively, if only she could end it with a dramatic scene and a grande finale. But nine times out of ten a man sneaks out through the wings before the drama is over.

* * *

When a woman discovers that love is dead, she likes to give it a beautiful burial service with flowers and sad music. But a man scarcely stops to fling a shovelful of earth on its grave, and then rushes off in search of consolation—or a new love—to make him forget it!

* * *

A woman keeps the ashes of her dead loves carefully laid away in the lavender of memory to sweeten her old age. But a man's dead loves are so dead that he wouldn't recognize them if you dug them up and introduced them to him.

* * *

Some men can break off a love affair so gently and gracefully that a woman feels almost flattered; but most of them are so impatient, once they get "that tired feeling," that they snatch up the nearest cleaver and CHOP it off.

* * *

Breaking off a really beautiful love affair is like having a tooth extracted. You do not feel the pain until the cocaine of anger, jealousy or relief wears off—and then you suddenly realize that what is gone has left an awful hollow.

* * *

The "morning after" love's intoxication, most people want to die; but as soon as the headache and the heartache subside they begin to look around for a bracer, an antidote—or another stimulant.

* * *

And nearly always. Just as you think you are going to die because of a lost love—another love comes along and interrupts you!

* * *

Love is a magic airplane, which takes you up into the clouds. But don't start on the voyage without plenty of ballast, and a lot of PHILOSOPHY. You'll NEED it as a parachute!

CAN IDEALS BECOME REALITIES?

By Lucy Lowell

IT'S continually on the lips of many, this phrase, "to realize the ideal." The ideal—a goal seen from afar, a thing longed for, dreamed of and seldom attained.

To realize it—make it so real that it may be grasped and brought as a tangible, living force into everyday experience—this is what realizing it means.

They say this cannot be done; they give reasons why the ideal—a perfect thing—becomes full of faults, prosaic and uninspiring when, if ever, it is dragged into the realm of everyday events. BUT—

Is this true?

Isn't it more likely that what passes for the ideal under these conditions is a makeshift—merely a compromise between a noble thing and one less lofty but more easily obtainable?

We know that people have realized their ideals, that this therefore, is not an impossible thing to do. Which leads to the question of whether there may be any definite plan of action by which one may set about making his ideal real.

Might it be, for example, that if he changed environment and took care to see that all things about him were more harmonious than they usually are in the average life, he then could put his ideal into effect?

The obvious answer to this, of course, is that many who most spectacularly have realized their ideals have done so in spite of adverse surroundings and circumstances. Indeed, it often is the case that the very fact of uncongenial environment forces one to the final effort toward betterment which brings the thing he sees as ultimate achievement into his experience.

Nor do I believe that selecting convenient opportunities for putting an ideal into effect or by thinking and speaking of it as an ideal, would help to make it real.

It seems to me more reasonable to believe that calm and certain acceptance of the ideal as the real—holding steadfastly to this view of it—is the attitude which most quickly and surely would make it real to us.

The commonplaceness which it inevitably would take on would dim some of its brightness if it be a true ideal. In other words, realizing it would destroy none of its beauty.

FOR Acid Stomach

PHILLIPS' Milk of Magnesia

Instead of soda hereafter take a little "Phillips Milk of Magnesia" in water any time for indigestion or sour, acid, gassy stomach, and relief will come instantly.

Better Than Soda

For fifty years genuine "Phillips Milk of Magnesia" has been prescribed by physicians because it overcomes three times as much acid in the stomach as a saturated solution of bicarbonate of soda, leaving the stomach sweet and free from all gases. Besides, it neutralizes acid fermentations in the bowels and gently urges this sour-making waste from the system without purging. It is far more pleasant to take than soda.

Try a 25c Bottle

Insist upon "Phillips." Twenty-five cent and fifty cent bottles, any drugstore. "Milk of Magnesia" has been the U. S. Registered Trade Mark of The Charles H. Phillips Chemical Company and its predecessor Charles H. Phillips since 1875.

NATIONAL POLICIES OF THE HEARST NEWSPAPERS

1. An agreement of English-speaking peoples to preserve peace among themselves and promote the peace of the world.
2. A constitutional amendment to provide for the election of United States Senators in numbers proportionate to the population of each State, but no State to have less than two Senators. A reapportionment of Congressional representation immediately after every census, or in case of the failure of Congress so to act, to make the apportionment automatic at the end of the first Congressional session, the proportion of population for each representative in each case to be that of the existing Congress.
3. A separate Department of the Army, of the Navy and of the Air Forces, all united under a Secretary of National Defense.
4. Federal action to the limit of Federal Government powers to abolish illiteracy among the people of the United States, and the creation of a Secretary of Education.
5. Necessary measures to secure the election of Congress in November and its installation on the 1st of January following, and the inauguration of a President on the 1st of January immediately following his election in November.

Two Brave Men

And an Ill-Fated Emblem

LAST PICTURE TAKEN OF THE TWO BRAVE FRENCHMEN, NUNGESSER AND COLI.

The world still hopes that Nungesser and Coli, brave, fighting Frenchmen, may yet return to safety. But, unfortunately, there is cause to fear that they made their last FLIGHT on this earth when they started on the non-stop trip across the Atlantic.

Unfortunately, the story that Lindbergh tells of his flight, and of one particularly dangerous moment, adds to the fear that Nungesser and Coli were driven down on the ocean and lost.

Lindbergh describes a sleet storm that he met over cold Newfoundland, moisture in the air and drizzling rain forming ice on the plane wings. For a moment he thought he might have to turn back, but, fortunately for his success and glory, he kept on, sleet ceased to bother him and he came through safely.

Nungesser and Coli started much earlier, when the cold was greater and danger from sleet, of which they know nothing, was also greater.

Lindbergh, pointing out the danger to which Nungesser and Coli may have been exposed, says that not only the weight of the ice forming on the plane wings is dangerous, but also the fact that accumulating ice would "change the wing curve," bending down the wings of the plane out of their natural shape, making flying impossible.

The world will continue to hope for the best, but in any case the two brave Frenchmen, if they must never return, will have died as they would have liked to do, IN ACTION, and working for the glory of France.

The superstitious will be impressed by the second picture in this column, showing the rather gruesome device carried by the two Frenchmen on their airplane.

THE ILL-FATED EMBLEM.

Above a skull and crossbones is a coffin with a cross upon it, on either side a lighted candle.

It was NOT an unlucky emblem as far as Nungesser, who invented it, was concerned. He carried it through his fighting hours during the war. Many an enemy aviator crashed to the ground and saw nothing more after once seeing that skull and bones.

Nungesser borrowed the skull and crossbones from the Death's Head Hussars, a German regiment, to which the German Crown Prince belonged, that wears a skull and crossbones on its high hat.

Nungesser's idea was to show the Germans, against whom he fought, that a French skull and crossbones could be the most dangerous of all.

He made good his plan, being the greatest ace that the war produced, bringing down many planes and killing many, while he himself received seventeen wounds.

It is too bad that Nungesser and Coli could not have accomplished the flight that they had planned. But it could have added little to their glory.

Men that fight for their country, GLADLY, BRAVELY and SUCCESSFULLY, as these men did, need no other and could have no GREA[illegible] glory.

WHY SOME SEEK NOTORIETY

By DR. FRANK CRANE

In a play called "Chicago" we witness all kinds of people from the Judge on the bench to the prisoner at the bar seeking notoriety.

There seems to be an insane desire on the part of some people to be talked about.

The crook is proud of his reputation as a thief or a slugger, and some men have been proud of their ability to consume great quantities of alcoholic liquor.

We should not only ask ourselves if we are famous, but what we are famous for. It is one thing to attract attention and another thing to do something worthy of being noted. Just to be notorious is not to be famous.

And now comes a football star in the West who challenges the world to a milk-drinking contest. He claims to have drunk thirty-six glasses of milk at one sitting.

On account of his gustatory prowess the boys call him "Moo." Some fame!

You read of a truck driver in Sioux City, Iowa, who strains the buttons of his vest as he is photographed taking his 132nd cup of coffee in four and a half hours. He goes back to his truck elated that no one in the world has ever made such a fool of himself as he.

You read of a young man in Columbus, Ohio, who becomes a "world champion" in an afternoon. He ate five dozen oranges in two and a half hours and is immensely proud of himself.

There are others. The man who pounds the piano for several days until he tumbles off the stool, the dancers who keep on sliding around the floor for a new "endurance record," the one who eats the most sugar, drinks the most tea, smokes the most tobacco, wears the same collar-button longest, and so on.

They all step right up in front and let the world know that they are above the common quiet run of folk.

Then there is the "publicity hound," who gobbles up good, bad and indifferent mention of his name with equal avidity.

A man in the East who made a consummate fool of himself in robbing the cradle in search of a wife, is said to have taken out a large insurance upon the scrapbooks that held all the morbid clippings of his divorce case.

All of these people are troubled by the same thing.

Their inferiority complex is based on solid rock. They have a secret sense of not amounting to much. That secret sense is right.

They have never done anything really worth while, anything that brings their name before the public in an honorable way, and they know it.

So they resort to writing on bare walls and to excelling in things that are worthless.

BOSTON DAY BY DAY

VACATION

FRANK J. SQUIRES, genial clerk of the district court of Northern Norfolk at Dedham, is taking a long needed rest for the Summer. MR. SQUIRES is with MRS. SQUIRES on his way to Europe and plans not to return for at least eight weeks. FRANK says that he has listened long enough to disgruntled wives and husbands applying for warrants and others with more or less trouble and believes that it is time that he lay off that "stuff" for a while at least.

RESOURCEFUL

Resourcefulness is one of the qualities possessed by COURT OFFICER WILLIAM McDERMOTT, who is responsible for the keeping of law and order in one of the courtrooms in the Suffolk Superior Court. "Quiet in the courtroom," said WILLIAM at a recent session, rapping on his desk with a key. The key broke. Later he used a pencil, which met a similar fate, and now he is using his signet ring.

JUST FRIENDS

B. NASON HAMLIN of Milton, the noted polo player and interested in the games of the Dedham Country and Polo Club, is a kind friend to the newspaper men who are assigned to cover the polo matches, always ready and willing to advance whatever information he has at hand about the game and at the same time is among the gallery shaking hands and tipping his hat to acquaintances. MR. HAMLIN is a great believer in giving the young fellow a chance to play polo, and no matter how many are on hand and eager to play the game, he always manages to have them play one chukker at least, if not more.

LAW

Those who have been led to doubt the effectiveness of the so-called "boulevard stop" law by the difficulties that have been encountered in enforcing it along the NEWBURYPORT TURNPIKE should go to WALTHAM and observe how well the law is obeyed there. The ordinance was passed about a year ago and since then there have been repeated drives by the police in enforcing it. It has come to the point now where many cautious autoists come to a stop and remain at a standstill for nearly a minute before venturing to enter streets where the regulation is in force.

LISTEN, WORD!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

A LETTER has come to me from the jail—a boy's crude, unhappy scrawl.

"They've got me again, Elsie. It's no use. There's sure a jinx on me, I just can't help taking things—honest, Elsie, I can't. Ever since I was a little kid and swiped the first dollar from dad and got beat up for it I know I was a thief. My folks all said I was. So what's the use of trying when you've got a thing like that inside you? It was a motorcycle this time and they got the goods on me and three other fellows. I thought I'd let you know I'm sure sorry but it ain't no use."

Is there something familiar about Jimmy's cry?

Have you said something like that yourself when you have fallen once more for your Besetting Sin?

Have you, too, moaned—"What's the use of trying when you've got a thing like that inside you?"

Yes, I suppose you have. That's why my answer to Jimmy's letter is going to go for all of us—

Listen Jimmy—

If you want to come clear out of this tangle there is one truth which you must lay hold of with all your might—

YOU ARE NOT BAD.

You are not haunted by some vicious monster. You are not in the grip of some evil power over which you have no control. You may have done bad things, foolish and cruel things, but you, yourself, are not bad.

YOU ARE GOOD. And you love decency. You love courage and honesty and square shooting.

Never mind what other people say about you. That's the REAL you and you know it.

Now how are you going to put this Real You across?

BY BELIEVING IN HIM. By believing in the self which you know is your true self. And by treating this evil habit as the bad nightmare which it really is.

What have you said in the past when you've met temptation? You have said—"Aw, gosh, whatsa use of fighting? I'm bound to fall for this thing. That's the way I was made. There isn't any use fighting a thing if you are made that way."

That's what you have said in the past when temptation came. And because you said it, the temptation got you—But you are going to say something different when temptation comes next time, you're going to say—

"Well, here's a chance to steal again—but after all, I don't have to steal just because there's a chance. Other people have chances to steal. But that doesn't make them steal. And it needn't make me steal either. I really don't want to steal, deep inside me. I'm bright enough to get along without stealing. But somehow, I have always had the silly hunch that I HAD to steal—that I was a thief. But now that I look the matter straight in the face, I see that I don't have to steal any more than any one else. And by golly, I'm not going to steal."

Those are simple words, Jim. They do not sound like powerful words. But if you will say them AND REALLY BELIEVE THEM, they will be like chain armor to protect you from evil.

IF YOU'LL BELIEVE IN YOUR OWN GOODNESS AND STAND UP FOR IT NO EVIL CAN GET THROUGH TO YOU.

And you ARE good, Jim. Good all through.
